What did I assume? I ask you why you hadn't given him credit in your write ups. I have a copy of your web page, there is no credit to Brian on it either. I don't care if he cares, I just ask you why your write ups didn't give him the credit.

As for me not knowing what I am talking about, you seem to be the one that doesn't know what he is talking about. At least I knew about the TMRA article, you didn't.

Nothin' cowardly about it, jerkoff. I got a nice welcoming commitee just waiting for anyone who wants to start some shenanigans. In any case, what would one possibly have to say to mopeadope that can't be said right here? He's a keyclown. Keyclowns have nothing to offer that's worth hearing, anyway.

Mopeadope just wants to tell us the AKC shouldn't be doing opposition to keyclownism, or attempt intimidation to get the dissent to cease. Frankly, coming to somene's house like that is just a peck of trouble waiting to drop on any keyclowns stupid enough to do it. It is great to feel that frustration emnating from you sissy sock puppeteers. .

AKC don't care what you or mopeadope want. AKC don't care how insulting you act. AKC don't care at all. Nothing you have said has any effect on AKC people. We know it sucks to whine agonizingly about mopeadopes fruitless trips, but that's how it is. Deal with it. If you don't like what someone says you can always filter it, so whoopie doo! But you keyclowns aint got enough upstairs, you are just whiny children that daddy wouldn't give a Hershey bar to while waiting in the checkout at Walgreen's.

If ya don't like them apples you can sniff the new basket of rotten ones cooked up by the AKC. they come in rotton and extra wormy...you oughta like either one.

NEXT! (chuckle)

twithed's intellectual superior replies:

There is no problem, only in you keyklown's weak minds. You have the problem, nobody from AKC has any problems related to this NG. There aint a thing you can do to change that.

On the other hand, you can always come by on the public areas of the neighborhood, start some crap around here, and find out for certain who has the problem. What a funny thing it would be to hear that timebomb in your submarine. (timebomb line from an old Alice Cooper song)

"created a problem"? indeed...for keyclowns. There STILL aint squat ya can do about it.

GREAT IDEA there will be AKC agents at least one if not two attending any keyclown shindig we have people on the inside for just this purpose. Digicams at the event will record names, faces and macth them to license plates..so then the hams in this NG will have names and faces to go with your addys LOL

That's right! Who's really lying to us now!!! President Bush has not changed his position on Iraq at all. From the time he decided to run for president he has been consistant on his stand towards Iraq and other terrorist entities.

The same cannot be said for leaders in the Democratic Party. Including Bill Clinton, Al Gore, John Kerry and others. Their proven flip on this issue is as glaring as it is offensive. YET they continue to claim the moral high ground in this debate.

WELL.... read the quotes collected below and if you can still put any confidence in these people you need to examine your own moral foundations. For me, their credibility is now NON-EXISTANT !!!

IT ISN'T SAFE FOR AMERICA TO VOTE DEMOCRAT !!!

"One way or the other, we are determined to deny Iraq the capacity to develop weapons of mass destruction and the missiles to deliver them. That is our bottom line."
- President Clinton, Feb. 4, 1998

"If Saddam rejects peace and we have to use force, our purpose is clear. We want to seriously diminish the threat posed by Iraq's weapons of mass destruction program."
- President Clinton, Feb. 17, 1998

"Iraq is a long way from [the USA], but what happens there matters a great deal here. For the risks that the leaders of a rogue state will use nuclear, chemical or biological weapons against us or our allies is the greatest security threat we face."
- Madeline Albright, Feb 18, 1998

"He will use those weapons of mass destruction again, as he has ten times since 1983."
- Sandy Berger, Clinton National Security Adviser, Feb, 18, 1998

"[W]e urge you, after consulting with Congress, and consistent with the U.S.Constitution and laws, to take necessary actions (including, if appropriate, air and missile strikes on suspect Iraqi sites) to respond effectively to the threat posed by Iraq's refusal to end its weapons of mass destruction programs."
- Letter to President Clinton, signed by Sens. Carl Levin,Tom Daschle, John Kerry, and others Oct. 9, 1998

"Saddam Hussein has been engaged in the development of weapons of mass destruction technology which is a threat to countries in the region and he has made a mockery of the weapons inspection process."

- Rep. Nancy Pelosi (D, CA), Dec. 16, 1998

"Hussein has ... chosen to spend his money on building weapons of mass destruction and palaces for his cronies."
- Madeline Albright, Clinton Secretary of State, Nov. 10, 1999

"There is no doubt that ... Saddam Hussein has invigorated his weapons programs. Reports indicate that biological, chemical and nuclear programs continue apace and may be back to pre-Gulf War status. In addition, Saddam continues to redefine delivery systems and is doubtless using the cover of a licit missile program to develop longer-range missiles that will threaten the United States and our allies."
- Letter to President Bush, Signed by Sen. Bob Graham (D, FL,)and others, December 5, 2001

"We begin with the common belief that Saddam Hussein is a tyrant and a threat to the peace and stability of the region. He has ignored the mandated of the United Nations and is building weapons of mass destruction and the means of delivering them."
- Sen. Carl Levin (D, MI), Sept. 19, 2002

"We know that he has stored secret supplies of biological and chemical weapons throughout his country."
- Al Gore, Sept. 23, 2002

"Iraq's search for weapons of mass destruction has proven impossible to deter and we should assume that it will continue for as long as Saddam is in power."
- Al Gore, Sept. 23, 2002

"We have known for! many years that Saddam Hussein is seeking and developing weapons of mass destruction."
- Sen. Ted Kennedy (D, MA), Sept. 27, 2002

"The last UN weapons inspectors left Iraq in October of 1998. We are confident that Saddam Hussein retains some stockpiles of chemical and biological weapons, and that he has since embarked on a crash course to build up his chemical and biological warfare capabilities. Intelligence reports indicate that he is seeking nuclear weapons..."
- Sen. Robert Byrd (D, WV), Oct. 3, 2002

"I will be voting to give the President of the United States the authority to use force-- if necessary-- to disarm Saddam Hussein because I believe that a deadly arsenal of weapons of mass destruction in his hands is a real and grave threat to our security."
- Sen. John F. Kerry (D, MA), Oct. 9, 2002

"There is unmistakable evidence that Saddam Hussein is working aggressively to develop nuclear weapons and will likely have nuclear weapons within the next five years ... We also should remember we have always underestimated the progress Saddam has made in development of weapons of mass destruction."

- Sen. Jay Rockefeller (D, WV), Oct 10, 2002

"He has systematically violated, over the course of the past 11 years, every significant UN resolution that has demanded that he disarm and destroy his chemical and biological weapons, and any nuclear capacity. This he has refused to do"
- Henry Waxman (D, CA), Oct. 10, 2002

"In the four years since the inspectors left, intelligence reports show that Saddam Hussein has worked to rebuild his chemical and biological weapons stock, his missile delivery capability, and his nuclear program. He has also given aid, comfort, and sanctuary to terrorists, including al Qaeda members .. It is clear, however, that if left unchecked, Saddam Hussein will continue to increase his capacity to wage biological and chemical warfare, and will keep trying to develop nuclear weapons."
- Sen. Hillary Clinton (D, NY), Oct 10, 2002

"We are in possession of what I think to be compelling evidence that Saddam Hussein has, and has had for a number of years, a developing capacity for the production and storage of weapons of mass destruction."
- Sen. Bob Graham (D, FL), Dec. 8, 2002

"Without question, we need to disarm Saddam Hussein. He is a brutal,murderous dictator, leading an oppressive regime ... He presents a particularly grievous threat because he is so consistently prone to miscalculation ... And now he is miscalculating America's response to his continued deceit and his consistent grasp for weapons of mass destruction ... So the threat of Saddam Hussein with weapons of mass destruction is real ..."
- Sen. John F. Kerry ! (D, MA), Jan. 23. 2003

SO NOW THE DEMOCRATS SAY PRESIDENT BUSH LIED, THAT THERE NEVER WERE ANY WEAPONS OF MASS DESTRUCTION AND HE TOOK US TO WAR FOR HIS OIL BUDDIES???

So there you have it! As late as Oct.2002 John Kerry was ON RECORD as supporting military action. As late as Sept 2002 Al Gore and Ted Kennedy were saying something has to be done about Saddam !! Even Hillary Clinton expressed her concern with Saddam !!(why did Billary turn down the Saudi's offer of Bin Laden anyway??)
Now they are singing a different tune.

WHY ???

Because Mr. Bush had the courage to do what they did not. And now they want you to trust them....again.

As for Iraq, I think regardless of what political party...when Saddam attempted to kill GHW Bush we shoulda zapped his ass right then. What do we deserve as a country if we are too gutless to do that when another country attemps killing a President?

Another reason that bin Laden attacked America...we didn't retaliate very much at all (a few missiles at an empty building) when the assasination attempt happened. He saw us as weak. In that culture, such an attempt on a King or President would result in a lengthy blood bath. if you were 9th cousin to a killer like that your ass would likely be thrown in some hole of a prison, rotting away.

If we are too timid to deal with them they will try to kill us en masse again. Everyone ought to understand that and it is a saddening thing to think they do not.

Are your reading skills not up to par tonight? They weren't discussing organizing a keydown. They were discussing a picnic and campout. Going to a keydown isn't breaking the law. Participating in one with illegal equipment is.

So you plan to show up at a CB picnic, record names and license plates? Now isn't the same thing you are bitching about Steve doing?

Ha! You've said it! A puppet!

But tonight the puppet master(s) weren't able to control their front man too well so he performed a classic display of himself in his true void. I don't know how many times he repeated "and it's hard work!" but the more he did, the more he showed how thin is his grasp of things and how little he's able to defend whatever he pushes for. Long hesitations, frequent stuttering, several times repeating the same lines over and over in front of a hastily modified lead every time. He didn't sound like a president. He sounded like a choking tape recorder. Couldn't even keep munching the inside of his mouth every time Kerry was taking him down. All crunched up the rest of the time. He didn't look like a president. He plain and simple looked like an embarrassed con man who's so slow that he still hasn't fully processed that he's put himself up to a challenge he's much too small to achieve. This is great stuff. A full blown crash in the making. Right before out eyes. I can't wait for the next two debates!

They're all fucking liars who have sold us down the shitter. Clinton and the Republicans sold all the good jobs overseas and Bush continues to do so. It's said "how can you tell a politician is lying? His lips are moving."

Agreed, it was a thoroughly one-sided victory. The most powerful man in the world wilted.

When Bush went after Kerry, it was like he was nailing jello to a wall. When Kerry criticized Bush, it had the effect of driving a stake through the heart of a vampire. Kerry was that good, and Bush was that bad. The "outsourcing the hunt for Osama to the opium warlords" was brilliant. My main disappointment with Kerry was his not mentioning Bush's threat to veto the $87 billion war bill -- Bush is a total hypocrite on that -- Kerry had an opening and let it slip. Not that it mattered, he destroyed Bush in every category. Bush looked clueless, amateur, unprepared. Kerry looked well-drilled and confident. He can think on his feet. Bush, again, when he deviates from Dick's script, he looks like a contestant on The Gong Show. And this is the President of the United States. Sad, really.

KERRY: The president always has the right, and always has had the right, for preemptive strike. That was a great doctrine throughout the Cold War. And it was always one of the things we argued about with respect to arms control.

No president, though all of American history, has ever ceded, and nor would I, the right to preempt in any way necessary to protect the United States of America.

But if and when you do it, Jim, you have to do it in a way that passes the test, that passes the global test...

Huh? Kerry is in favor of pre-emptive attacks as long as the world approves of them first. Hey France, is it OK if we defend ourselves, please? Please?

Lehrer Stacks Deck Against Bush

Presidential debate moderator Jim Lehrer showed once again Thursday night why top aides to President Clinton used to call him "our moderator" when presidential debate time rolled around in 1996.

The questions, which Lehrer announced at the outset had been authored exclusively by him, were supposed to help the American people determine which candidate would be a better steward of U.S. national security in a post-9/11 world.

Story Continues Below

But there were no queries to Sen. Kerry about his long Senate record of voting against defense appropriations, or his sponsorship of a bill to cut CIA funding by $6 billion a year after terrorists struck the World Trade Center in 1993, or Kerry's support of the nuclear freeze movement during the height of the Cold War.
Kerry wasn't asked why he teamed up with Jane Fonda to protest the Vietnam War while his band of brothers were still on the battlefield, or why he met with enemy leaders in Paris, or why he accused fellow soldiers of being "monsters" and "war criminals."

Most Americans would consider the answers to those questions extremely relevant to the selection of any U.S. commander in chief during a time of war.

But not Jim Lehrer. Instead, he focused on Iraq with question after question that suggested Bush had blown it.

Here's a sampling:

"You said there was a miscalculation in Iraq," Lehrer asked the president. "What was it and how did it happen?"

"What colossal misjudgments, in your opinion," Lehrer asked Kerry, "has President Bush made in these areas [Iraq]?"

To Bush: "Mr. President, has Iraq been worth the cost in American lives -10,052 - I mean 1,052 up to today?"

To Kerry: "You've repeatedly accused President Bush of lying to the American people on Iraq. Give us some examples of the president being untruthful on Iraq."

Despite his focus on Iraq, however, Lehrer never asked why Kerry voted to authorize the war, then turned around and voted against the legislation to fund it. Or why he voted against authorization for the first Gulf War, even though President Bush's father had amassed just the kind of coalition Kerry says the U.S. needs now.

Likewise, the PBS host declined to ask Kerry about comments in recent days from French and German officials who announced they have no intention of sending troops to Iraq, even if Kerry is elected.

That's quite a stunning development, given that Kerry's Iraq policy rests almost solely on the promise that he'll persuade Old Europe to pitch in and take some of the load off U.S. forces.

But not stunning enough, apparently, to interest Mr. Lehrer.

Back then America had a real President, not a puppet. That's the difference that explains why you guys went for Irak leaving the real problems behind like Bin Laden still running free or like Kim Jong Il who's busy stockpiling real WMDs. And that's not mentionning Iran who's not far behind. Way to go. Resounding success.

His lips do move, look closely.

Somone ought to tell Bush that if he can stay awake during the debate, he might do a bit better. And perhaps his smears might do a bit better if they were on subject. I was very embarrissed to watch Bush. It was pithetic. He had about four phrases which he memorized and he just repeated them over and over. Regardless of the question, he was like a windup doll.

Q: "Mr Bush, How is the war in Iraq going?"
Bush: "Kerry flip flops. He has taken both sides of every issue. He can't pay for his programs. He has taken both sides of every issue. Kerry flip flops.".

A one trick pony. I mean, even a parrot can learn more phrases than that. And this was the debate that Bush was supposed to do the best in. He was on the defensive the whole time, striking out with personal attacks rather than answering the questions, fumbling around for words, wandering off subject answers, smirking and falling asleep when he wasn't talking. As I said, embarissing.

I can find no reference to President Bush mentioning 'flip-flop'.

I haven't seen anyone do what Dogie has done. No, they DON'T do the same thing. He was convicted of jamming a repeater and interfering with the Toledo Amateur Radio Club by the FCC.

N8WWM initiated sharing his mental deficiencies with the group. Him getting busted just enhanced it.

You are wrong all the time on a variety of subjects, so it is of little surprise or consequence that you convict people based on your ignorance and their choice of topic.

>they only want to post shit about >doug breaking the law when they do it

Dogie was the one that began the bullshit, initiating the tossing of fecal matter, the calling of those on this group "felons" and "gay" and much worse, all because he doesn't agree with their choice of topic they choose to discuss. You won't see any Peebles or Vanderpoole or Shane or McCambpell or Nebo or Gilliland or Scott or Oxendine (although Oxendine is more than likely a closet illegal based on the behavior exhibited on this medium) or any one else from this group busted by the FCC and listed on the Rain Report,, just Dogie. You saying one is guilty means absolutely nothing. The FCC busting Dogie's repeater-jamming azz, coupled with his hypocrisy of calling people "gay" or a "felon" for talking dx or freebanding led to his public criminal record being well, made public. It appears the mad jammer has a severe tick when it comes to such information being made public. He's a guilty nutha' sucka' with emotional problems who was ordered by the court to seek professional treatment for his mental deficiencies responsible for his conviction regarding children. And that's all folks!

Try and remian relevant. No one mentioned anything regarding physical acts except now, by yourself, as a means of deflecting and obfuscating N3CVJ's threat. Try again. Only a few scumbags are interested in harassment in the manner N3CVJ employs: threatening with the "spreading of your personal information" . What a social misfit loser. The two of you are quite a pair, these lonely nights, you both can share. As you reach out and touch his face....

Au contraire. If you owned a credit card, you would know this proves just the opposite. I am quite happy to add to your capacitive deficiency :) By providing his credit card number, it solidifies beyond a doubt what he seeks. Patronizing services via a credit card-accepting merchant also adds trust and consumer confidence and offers him protection from unfair charges. It also guarantees what he has been seeking for so long, but alas, he appears to want something for nothing and you have positioned yourself as his staunch defender, much as you did with N8WWM after the FCC busted his scuzy azz for jamming.

N3CVJ wants my personal information (to meet at MY work),,and I am willing to give it to him. All he has to do is book a trip. End of story.

Sorry, it's not there.... must be in the copy the Liberals distributed.

It's quite interesting that even the Liberal pundits this morning are saying that President Bush

Neither of the 2 negative feedbacks I have ever had had anything to do with radio antennas. Also, the feedback on one of them is literally a form that the guy posts for people he tries to rip off after the auction ends and bitched about it to him. I don't have to defend myself in the face of well over 100 positive feedbacks on the antennas, just laffin' at how hard you fools work to try to find something. That in and of itself proves how much the AKC gets to ya.

You grasp at straws so hard we know you are having a problem dealing with AKC. Like a drowning rat you seek to claw upward but can't. Nymboys like you are totally ineffective against the AKC.

Click the link that dxAce provided. Do a copy and paste of the transcript into notepad. Now click "edit" then "find". Type "flip" (without quotes). you will get a message box saying that "flip" was not found. Do the same for "flop" and "flip-flop" and "flip flop" and "flipflop"..... get the picture?

Definition of bigot(to a democrat): A republican who just kicked his ass in an arguement. That hypocritical lying sack of shit Kerry...he votes against the 87 billion then tells the country it's a shame that all the troops don't have body armor. They would have it if he hadn't

I guess my perception of Kerry then is that he was constantly saying 'I'm an idiot but don't tell anyone' every other sentence is a correct assessment of what he said.

Is that how it works? Or should one take the transcript literally?

There is no way to know what "twistedhed", "steveo", "ice", "BP", etc. have done when they hide there identities. Keyclowns in this NG stay totaly anonymous while people like doug, dave hall, leland, etc. stay totally open with nothing to hide. any one with a computer can look up records on hams.

Yes but who knows what "twistedhed" has done? Or "train"? Or any of the keyclowns who are hiding behind a nic? They might have police records. They might have comited crimes. They might owe taxes. But we will never know - because they will never come out of hiding LOL

Or what about his abuse of the repeater system for which he was
spanked by the rain report?

N8WWM guilty of FCC violations. According to the FCC, N8WWM, Dog
Adair committed several violations over the air at the expense of the Toledo Amateur Radio Club by utilizing their repeater to break the law. The amateur club received a warning letter from the FCC concerning Adair's violations and were told to take steps to make certain the violations by Adair will not be repeated. Adair not only hurt the entire image of amateur radio with his inexcusable behavior, but damaged the reputation of yet another entity trying to further the good of amateur radio. It's a shame when bad apples like these make it so clubs can't even trust their own users to abide by the rules they were sworn to uphold. Adair is also an infamous presence on the internet. A google search of "N8WWM" reveals a peek into the world of the individual identified as Adair. In addition to FCC violations, Adair has, in the past, been accused of being a prolific spammer, breaking several internet laws and violating several terms of service agreements with internet providers.

John Kerry: What are you going to do to correct your colossal intelligence failure?

George Bush: It's a different world now. I know I was an idiot who could not connect dots before 911, but now, I'm fighting the war on terror

John Kerry: And what have you done to fight terrorism since 911?

George Bush: I used the CIA to destroy Iraq -remember the first casualty of the Iraq war was a CIA agent and I talked to regime change Tenet every single day until he abandoned me. And now that he is gone, I talk to FBI Director Mueller everyday. That's right, I talk to Mueller everyday and that's hard work.

John Kerry: So you invaded Iraq to fight terrorism? Sadam Hussein did not invade America, it was Osama Bin Laden who invaded America?

George Bush: Of course I know Osama Bin Laden invaded America, even I know that.

John Kerry: You knew that, but you gave Osama Bin Laden the opportunity to say, "mission accomplished". He invaded America, he got away and he isolated America by turning allies into adversaries. Osama Bin Laden is on course. What are you doing?

George Bush: GRRRRR ! GRRRRRRR ! GRRRRRRRR ! Wrong war, right time, wrong place, wrong, wrong, right, er wrong !

Randy Chapman is a former crack addict, and all it took is a google search of his posts in alt.drugs to find out.

Same with Mark Beck, a bisexual who used the internet to arrange real life meetings with transsexual hookers while his wife was pregnant.

Just imagine what we could find out if we knew the real names of "twistedhed" and "steveo"....ROFLMAO.. no wonder they are desperate to stay hidden..

91. Aaron kicks Doug out of AKC...The list

This is some hilarious reading material. Even the "AKC" disowned the fruitcake we know as N8WWM, Doug Adair. Doug did not start the AKC, but was allowed in for a while until he lost it and reverted to his insane rants. The AKC was started by W5NET, Dwight Stewart, AKA Aaron Voobner, who more or less had some integrity to his posts. He ruled it, and decided whom to allow in. Then, in later times, after it was discovered who Aaron was, he left it. From that time on, there were a few wannabe's, including insane "George", who attempted to impersonate Aaron for a while, until politely asked to stop. Dwight no longer posts in ham radio newsgroups. I'm sure people like Doug and "George" have left a bad taste in his mouth. At any rate, the Google links posted below are proof that Doug is indeed insane, and does not speak for anyone but himself.

Enjoy.

The only consistent about my opponent's position is that he's been inconsistent. He changes positions.
</quote>

I think you can understand what he's implying there, right? If you want to take things too literally and protest Tammy's opinion on what she got from it well, our beloved president isn't the most articulate politician in the world. He would be even more difficult to understand if he had to sprinkle a little political doubletalk on top of his stumbling and stammering.

Overall, I believe our president is doing what he thinks is right for our nation. I would never believe for a minute that Kerry would ever have our interests at hart. Knowing this does not take away President Bush's poor performance last night.

So? Only thing proven is that perhaps he is not a good debater, and I don't think he's ever made that claim.

Being a good debater is not necessarily the test of a good leader.

Ask Mikey.

Wrong, putzboi. It was "Aaron", and you know it. Matter of fact, considering the AKC is disbanded, I'd be willing to bet he could be enticed to come back and make a fool of you AND Doug. Shall we give it a shot?

Is that why you mentioned it (file transfers)? To find something pc

Perhaps not, but they most certainly have a manner in which to load pics, but I have an old "classic" set up, the oldest webtv there is,,,the very first one. The only way I can post a pic is to receive it from someone else in email and then repost it or publish it on a page, or else cut and paste a pic, but of course, lifting a pic for any reason that the user did not take is against federal law governing intellectual property rights unless explicit written permission was given.

>Ok, that answers my question. You can't

In any event, let's clear up something for Mopar and myself. Mopar should be reminded that the discontent coming from "George" can be only one of two people....wa3moj, which Landshark has proven beyond reasonable doubt to the masses, or yourself. Now, before you get crazy, allow yourself this simple explanation.... you and "Geo" are the ONLY ones to ever post regarding intimate knowledge of Lancaster (Amish Country).......example: speaking of the previous ownership of Zinn's on Route 30.

>If Landshark has already "proven to the >masses" that "george" is really wa3moj, then

>why accuse me?

By virtue the process of elimination. "Geo" denies he is Geo (forget his call sign for the moment)....that leaves ONLY you, exhibited by the fact you two are the only ones with any intimate knowledge of the area in question around Lancaster.

>Let's analyze this statement for a second shall >we? You conclude that the person posting as

>"George" has to be either WA3MOJ or me,

I didn't conclude it, I surmised it.

>Semantics.

It's not. If I concluded it, I would have said so and said it was definite. I didn't. I said IF it wasn't Geo , it was you. Your quickness to jump and latch onto this tells me you probably have a hand in his dirty barrel of filth. Your threat leaves me no doubt your involvement and harasment level of participation. Your defending of N8WWM when he was busted jamming and your saying the FCC could be wrong and that Keith may have framed Dogie leaves little doubt to the rest of the world your agenda and position.

>based solely on the basis of our geographical >proximity to Lancaster Pa.?

Not at all,,I based it on you are the only two to have EVER posted here regarding information of Lancaster.

>And that precludes anyone else from living

>here and knowing something about the area?

Not at all, but there is no unknown factor here. The IP number is constant regardless what he chooses to refer himself and thiat IP number matches countless harassing posts, in addition to speaking on depth on several occasion of the area. ONLY you and "Geo" have ever exhibited knowledge of the area. The probabilty factor is always a hurdle for you, Davie, exhibited with certainty when you offered the pathetic near-zero probability that N8WWM was framed by someone prior to the FCC announcing he was busted for jamming the Toledo Amateur Radio Club members on multiple occasions.

>Hell, even you have made comments about >this general area. Maybe YOU are the one >posting as "George"?

As I said, you are really unnerved at this point, Davie. Lucidity is escaping you in increased increments.

>That would be the same sort of reckless

>you live in Florida, you must be the same guy

>who used to go by the handle of "King Kong"

>anyone else who you know, but rather another >anonymous twit who's been having a huge

And the only way you know this for absolutely sure and without any doubt whatsoever, is you are either that person, or heavily involved with the harassment. I surmise both.

>I didn't conclude it, I surmised it. ;-)

Actually, you didn't surmise it, you made a concise conclusion with a personal conviction of confirmation. Read again what you wrote.

>And you are correct. The only way that I

>WOULD know for sure is to have some direct >involvement. But I'm not saying that this IS the >case, only that it is a distinct possibility.

A very distinct possibility, In fact, given the threat you made, your unyielding attempts at uncovering personal information on cbers who post on usenet, coupled with the probability factors that keep coming in to play, leave little doubt your involvement. In fact, such a direct threat is a picture perfect of your involved harassment actions.

>One thing that I DO know for sure is that I've >never posted here in the last 9 years under >any other alias but my own given name. I have >no need to hide behind fictitious names.

Yea, well we showed that wasn't true either, as you were posting under the same account as that VE was at Villanova, When this was illustrated and brought to the group's attention, your reply was something along the lines.."Yea, well I borrowed an account at that time." You ahve made several claims that are off the wall, Davie..the threats, Keith framing Dogie, Dogie is really innocent,,,,,,,you are delusional, and so is the "Geo" poster.

>But the big question, that I want to know, is >why bring this up in the middle of a discussion >about the capabilities of WebTV?

Because you reminded me of your trouble making ways and double talk by posting and asking me things before you answer the questions posed to you.

>Lame excuse. But one that does not cover >your inability to remain on-topic.

Exactly,,,like our last exchange concerning your involuntary feelings of need to meet "Twistedhed".
Since you don't see things the way the majority of the world does, it is of little concern.

>That's a hoot, as I am far more in line with >what most moral, and respectful people see

>than you are evidently aware of.

Moral folks don't make idle threats based on their inability to discuss things rationally....you do. Respectful people don't pull a name from their azz (Keith) and say the FCC Rain report may be wrong because Keith "MAY" have tried to frame Dogie and the ''possibility does exist"...you did. Again, you are reaching for something so remote, that NONE , hammie or cber have subscribed to your theory, so feel free to repeat you are "in line" with the majority over and over. It simply fuels your delusion.

 My other piece of enjoyed entertainment at the moment is you appear to have lost your zest for the quest of meeting up with myself. After expressing your dire want to meet many times on this group and mentioning your trip to Disney, I offered you several avenues in which to achieve your quest, the last of which you failed to respond.

>One minor correction, I am not of a "dire want"
>to meet you.

Double-talk again.

>No, that's the straight up truth. You are >nothing more than a curiosity to me.

Curiosities doesn't lead to threats like you make. It's much more than that for you, davie, adn if it's not, you ought to have yourself examined for allowing a "curiosity" to overcome your better sense and lead to such behavior that it leads to you making threats.
 You went out of your way and became so enthralled in your frustration over this, you posted a direct threat that you would "spread my personal info around".

>When did I do that? Certainly not recently.

Sure you did, Davie, within the last couple of weeks.

> If I did make the comment that I would >"spread around your identity", it was only to >end the madness that had infected this >newsgroup.

Justifying your threats is expected, but stop blaming your behavior on others.

>Most anonymous agitators suddenly loose >their drive when everyone finds out who they >really are.

Rephrase: Justifying your threats is expected, as is your need to blame your behavior on myself.

>I've found that out time and time again on the >CB band over the years. That's why most of >the people in my channel groups have all >become proficient at direction finding. It's >helped to quell the idiot factor.

>I suspect that this is why you are being so >evasive when I inquired as to this meeting.

Misinterpreting the several manners I gave you in which to accomplish YOUR "curiosity" factor were met with excuses by yourself.

>You have no intention of revealing yourself, as >your anonymity is far more important to you

>than coming to some face to face reconciling.

Only I'm not anonymous to several on here. You were just told that in another thread, but you may continue professing whatever it is that makes you feel better about yourself.

>I will just be in the general area next month,

>and gave you the opportunity to prove once >and for all that you are someone beyond your >little cartoon character facade.

How privileged I am to be graced with the chance to "prove" something to you. If you mattered in the context of anything, I might be interested in what you do or do not believe, but alas, you do not, and I am perfectly content watching you self-frustrate over my cartoon character that drives your misguided quest.

>I'll take that as an admission that you have no >desire to set the record straight.

I'll take your declination of accepting a day's trip as you have no actual desire to meet up for any pertinent reason but to make good on your threat. The booking of your trip with a cc protects ME, as well as you, which is the main reason you will not provide it.

>You offered me the choice of either finding >you on the CB, which of course, I don't know >what you go by or what channels you talk on,

I would meet you on any channel/frequency you like and answer to whatever it is your curious azz wishes to call me. No more excuses about channels or handles, please.

>which then gives you a convenient excuse to >say that you weren't around when I came >looking. Or giving you MY cell phone number

>(Which I don't have), where again there is no >guarantee that you'd call and you now would >theoretically have a piece of my personal >information.

Only YOU are the one making threats with personal information, not I.

>Lose the lame excuse. It's no longer relevant.

To the masses, threats are very relevant. No Davie, you will not gloss over your threats and try and say they do not matter. Live with your erratic and harassing behavior instead of discounting it when it is illustrated. Your whining to forget your threat at least illustrates you know it was wrong, but you never cottoned too kindly to your making of mistakes and being wrong. It infuriates you.

What a case of classic self-projection,,,,merely because you would stoop and lower yourself to harassing another via the "spreading of their private information" doesn't mean others would do it. In fact, the majority of regs here are not like you at all. Only a few scumbags are interested in harassment as you threatened.

>Really? Then what do you call the latest round >of "intimidation" with Doug,

Dogie says this never occurred. Next.

>and Steveo, and

>Leland, and the on-again, off again "meetings,

Dogie initiated these meetings with threats of violence long ago.

>answering machine messages,

I know nothing of any answering machine messages.

Taking photos from a public right-of-way is not harassment. Mopar is gettting all the free legal advice he can handle regarding such media-like endeavors, and there ain't a law he is guilty of breaking

>and harassment of significant others then?

Your protection of felons who harass this group on a regular basis, who have been busted by the feds, who have been found to be mentally unstable by a court of law you always invoke (all laws are to be obeyed, etc.) who have made countess posts containing homosexual preferences, connotations, and verbiage as insults, is much more offensive to the majority
than the posting of public information of said felonious harassers that you ignorantly misinterpret as harassment.

>I'd say that there are quite a few people on >this board who are preoccupied with using >others personal information against them.

You're the main culprit. You are so preoccupied with it you had to threaten me with it.
And blaming others in order to justify your own agenda is no better than blaming me for MAKING you threaten me. Much unsettling non-conducive and unproductive behavior from you, Davie.

>That would involve a level of trust that I quite f >rankly do not have as of yet.

Seems like you have yourself another quandry.

>Do I?

Apparently. You are unable to get another to conform to what you want (that starved-for-status thing rearing its ugly head again in your low-self esteem) . The inner power/impotence struggle you exhibit isn't anyone elses quandry.

I will assume you were having fun and blowing smoke not expecting to actually be given several real-life opportunities to fulfill your curiosity and respond in kind. Behave yourself.

>Now, if you would just direct me to a place >where I could find you, at a specific time, then

>I could make the meeting.

Sure,,your hotel. In this manner, you have no personal information of mine (my work, my place of business), and I none of yours

>You'd drive all the way to Kissimee?

Maybe. Kissimmee is worse than Orlando for kitsch. But then again, there are a ton of lakes and rivers around there..make for some good freshwater fishing.

>Besides, you already know way more about >me, than I do about you.

That was your choice. Stop blaming me for your poor choices.

> You already know my name, my call sign, and >showing.

Because I won't do what you demand, makes for lack of trust on my behalf. excellent! Good luck in convincing anyone to share such a radical and deviated belief. Permit me to spin you around 180 degress so you can see the other side of the coin...you not conforming to what I ask is lack of trust on your behalf? Or does that only apply to your unique situation?

>You have a charter boat business. I would >think that would be an excellent opportunity.

Deal. Send me your credit card information for a full day excursion.

>Hah Hah!! Like I'd do that. What do you take >me for, a fool?

Same can be said to you regarding meeting at my place of business after you threatened me with the "spreading of your personal information". If I was a suit-seeker, I'd permit you to hang yourself with this. Your threat, when made good after meeting at my place of business would most definitely render you a pauper for the rest of your life, but such is illustrated only for your education. It may prevent a costly mistake when you fool with someone that takes you serious.

> Besides, for you to charge me, >you'd have to use a legitimate business name, >which would show up on my credit card bill.

>You sure you want to do that?

Send it.
I will give you ten percent professional discount and I accept Triple A, in addittion to AARP discounts. In the fall (now), I have a strict cancelation fee because of the crowds. A reservation fee of $100.00 is imposed on your card, but applied toward

But history proves without a doubt that both are very tightly related. One prime example, and conservative at that? Politely said, Nixon was factually a poor debater AND a poor leader. Your puppet idol has been walking the same path from his first day at the Whitehouse.

You certainly have a 'thing' about puppets, don't you 'tard?

Perhaps it is because you are one?

Are your strings a bit tangled today? Call a nurse, perhaps she'll straighten

One great advantage Kerry has is if you're a democrat, he's got something for you. Republican? Here's something for you, too!
Socialist? Yep, something for them, too. Hell, the guy has something for everyone! A real Santa Claus!

I haven't fallen for anything, though I suspect you fell in it sometime back.

About that train... is that the one you failed to catch? The one that would take you back to reality?

Or what about his abuse of the repeater system for which he was spanked by the rain report?

N8WWM guilty of FCC violations. According to the FCC, N8WWM, Dog
Adair committed several violations over the air at the expense of the Toledo Amateur Radio Club by utilizing their repeater to break the law. The amateur club received a warning letter from the FCC concerning Adair's violations and were told to take steps to make certain the violations by Adair will not be repeated. Adair not only hurt the entire image of amateur radio with his inexcusable behavior, but damaged the reputation of yet another entity trying to further the good of amateur radio. It's a shame when bad apples like these make it so clubs can't even trust their own users to abide by the rules they were sworn to uphold. Adair is also an infamous presence on the internet. A google search of "N8WWM" reveals a peek into the world of the individual identified as Adair. In addition to FCC violations, Adair has, in the past, been accused of being a prolific
spammer, breaking several internet laws and violating several terms of service agreements with internet providers.

Don't waste your time arguing with him, he can't vote.

Bushisms from the first debate:

"Our coalition is strong"
Translation: Tony Blair can bench his own weight.

"Alot of Saddam's loyalists disappeared thanks to the brilliant planning of General Tommy Franks. But we are fighting them now...."

"I see on the TV screen how hard it is (the war in Iraq)"

"Intelligence I looked at was the same intelligence my opponent looked at."
Translation: Blame Kerry for believing my failed, hand-picked Intel.

"We're being challenged by terrorists now more than ever"
Translation: Terror really did go up under my presidency and the war in Iraq is not going as well as planned with more soldiers dying since I claimed victory.

"If I were ever to say to the troops 'well, this war is not working'', what would they think?
Translation: Telling the truth about the war wil lose me military support and votes.

"The Prime Minister of Iraq was criticized by my opponent."
Translation: Not only do I not want my administration criticized, I don't want my approved and installed Iraqi leaders criticized, either.

"They (terrorists) are fighting freedom."

"It's essential we win the war on Iraq"
Translation: Did I say "Iraq"? I meant "Terror".

"I never wanted to commit troops, but the enemy attacked us. It's essential we win the war in Iraq".
Translation: If I repeat "Iraq" and "enemy" enough times, and redundantly use "911" and "Iraq" in the same sentence, the Americans may eventually believe the two were connected."

"Look at Libya. THEY understand us."

"N Korea did not abide by their agreements" Translation: "They don't have any U$ intere$t$, which is why I ignored warnings over a year and a half ago that Little Kim was restarting his reactor and did nothing.

"To the Moolahs,,,,,get rid of your nukular (SIC) cababilities"

"Osama is isolated"
Translation: I failed in capturing him and let him escape, but this could be the next best thing.

"There will be elections in the country (Iraq) in January."
Translation: Except, of course, in up to forty five percent of the geographical country, where it is still under the control of insurgents.

"It is wrong to say the war is wrong, as it sends (a) wrong message to the troops.
Speaking the truth about Iraq will lose me the only political life support I have.

"We have a plan to succeed in Iraq" Translation: Just don't ask me what it is."

"Best way to protect homeland is to stay on the offense" Translation: This allows me to justify the attack on Iraq and bomb any country I deem against the financial interests of my administration.

"It is my job as president to protect the country"
Translation: I failed to do my job, but I want another four years to try and get it right.

"We also changed the culture of the FBI."
Translation: "My hand picked staff was incompetent. The FBI warned me about Al Queda many times, so I had to make personnel changes.

"We will give the military all the equipment it needs."
Translation: ..now that the entire world knows I sent my troops into battle ill-equipped, I swear I will give them the armor protection they need if only you re-elect me.

"When the generals tell me there is stability and (Iraq is) on (their) way to being free. is when we will pull out of Iraq."

Check the appropriations bill. he was for it until it was hijacked and junked down with a bunch of non-relevant garbage. If Bush had the balls to to present the armor issue alone and by itself, it would have sailed and Kerry would have voted for it. Instead, Bush figured he would get his personal bullshit and favors to s contributors passed by using the safety of the soldiers as an excuse to get what he wants. He is a low life and is not concerned about expending lives or money when these things belong to other people.

IMO the two telling points were

1. Kerry made a clear, unqualified statement that nuclear proliferation and control of nuke materials was priorty #1. Bush agreed but couldn't make an unqualified statement, he had to link it to terrorism. HE said this at lleast twice, repeating himslef. We know that all (or vast vast majority) of the uranium and plutonium in the world is in the hands of nation states. At least for now.

2. Bush made an ambugious statement that at first reading said that we were attacked by SH. Kerry corrected him.

Here's 6 sentances where Bush said Kerry changed his positions, ie flip-flopped. The percentage is the approimate point in the fill text as posted by the Washington Post.

http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-srv/politics/debatereferee/debate_0930.html

They're not going to follow somebody who says this is the wrong war at the wrong place at the wrong time. They're not going to follow somebody whose core convictions keep changing because of politics in America. 35%

BUSH: The only consistent about my opponent's position is that he's been inconsistent. He changes positions. And you cannot change positions in this war on terror if you expect to win. 46%

You cannot lead the war on terror if you keep changing positions on the war on terror and say things like, "Well, this is just a grand diversion." It's not a grand diversion. This is an essential that we get it right. 51%

My concerns about the senator is that, in the course of this campaign, I've been listening very carefully to what he says, and he changes positions on the war in Iraq. He changes positions on something as fundamental as what you believe in your core, in your heart of hearts, is right in Iraq. 75%

You cannot lead if you send mixed messages. Mixed messages send the wrong signals to our troops. Mixed messages send the wrong signals to our allies. Mixed messages send the wrong signals to the Iraqi citizens. 75%

BUSH: And that's my biggest concern about my opponent. I admire his service. But I just know how this world works, and that in the councils of government, there must be certainty from the U.S. president. 75%

Darn, it's those 'ambugious' statements that'll screw up most anyone.

I'm fairly certain that there are some drugs out there that can cure the panic attacks that you seem

Check your emails, Canada seems to have a surplus of drugs these days. It's obvious no one up there Actually the world has been working hard trying to keep conservative run America from worsening the situation. You didn't want to fix the Bin Laden threat so you left it continue to spread. You didn't want to address the Korean problem so you showed your middle finger to Jong. Instead, using false reasons and lies all along, you went to war unilaterally against a literally paralyzed Irak after 12 years of sanctions. A country run by a lame has-been with no power at all. What a show of strength, yeah...

Worst of all, you can't even stabilize the mess you created in Irak and are now facing its neighbor Iran who will soon have its own nuclear arsenal. You jive talk and denounce Jong and his growing nuclear arsenal but you're working on designing a new breed of nuclear weapons on your own. You denounce nuclear proliferation and turn around aggravating the problem by building more of such weapons. Your current administration's policy on the matter is stupidly contradictory. Do what I say, don't do what I do.

Under the Clinton administration John Kerry, on 23 February 1998 stated:
"Saddam Hussein has already used these weapons and has made it clear that he has the intent to continue to try, by virtue of his duplicity and secrecy, to continue to do so. That is a threat to the stability of the Middle East. It is a threat with respect to the potential of terrorist activities on a global basis. It is a threat even to regions

Have an old tube radio that uses one crystal per channel. Not sure what kind it is as the front panel has been sanded and painted. Looks godd and works good though. Has a five position channelswitch and the radio has been modified to bring a crystal socket to the front panel. Rx is VFO. Have any idea of what kind of radio this is. I am thinking an old Layfayette. I want to get some new crystals for it.

I merely offered a possible alternative. When one does not know all the facts, it's irresponsible to jump to conclusions. It's called reasonable doubt. This was before the rest of the ugly picture was drawn about Doug's "troubled" past. He has issues to be sure. But then so do you. Only we have no way of finding out what they might be, and you are hell-bent to make sure it stays that way. It makes one wonder

No one here knows who you are. It would be far too tempting for them

You might have spoken to a few over the radio, and you might have had a face-to-face meeting with a few others, but no one knows anything more about you.

So harnessing someone who is a felon is acceptable? Once again, two wrongs don't make a right. I protect no one. I just don't jump on the bandwagon until the proof is forthcoming. I have said nothing in defense of Doug's activities since his convictions have become public.
That being said, it does not excuse those who seek to harness him.
Even felons have rights in this liberal, politically correct society.

You're kidding right? Assuming for a second that I found out the name of your business, and posted it here, do you actually think you'd have some sort of legal case? I'd love to hear the legal grounds. Anything that is in the public venue can expect no protection of privacy.
Posting sensitive information like a credit card number would be a different matter, but not something like a name or business. It's PUBLIC INFORMATION. Only through your clandestine efforts have you managed to conceal it from the rest of us.

I harass no one. I do stand up against those who do however, especially those who harass others and then hide behind the cloak of anonymity.

Sure. When shark used the same coincidental "mixed characters and

Oh, that's just the way "W" does things.

One reason he ended up being the candidate in 2000 is that he makes a VERY GOOD impression on folks in small groups where he comes across of quite sincere, effective, etc. He just doesn't come across as a Philadelphia Lawyer type.

Kerry did have the smarts not to make faces (like algore did) when it wasn't his turn to talk. Time will tell whether this has damaged "W."

I bet that downstream analysis will make "W" look better and JFK II look worse.

RESCUE RADIO: HAM RADIO MEETS HURRICANE JEANNE

Making landfall near Stuart, Florida, early on Sunday, September 26th, Hurricane Jeanne blew across that state with 120 mph wind and drenching rain. News reports say that the storm hurled debris into the air, tore rooftops off buildings and sent monster waves onto the shoreline. And as Jeanne's wrath played out on television screens across the nation, it was the calm voices of ham radio operators of the Voice Over I-P Hurricane Watch Net that signaled it was about to arrive:

"At 11 PM, the center of Hurricane Jeanne was located near Latitude 27.2 North and Longitude 80 West, or about 15 miles East of Stuart Florida. Jeanne is moving slightly North of West near 13 Miles Per Hour."

--

Hams also relayed a stark warning from the National Hurricane Center. One that said -- stay out of Jeanne's way:

"...with maximum sustained winds of 115 MPH with higher gusts, Hurricane Jeanne is a is a dangerous Catagory 3 hurricane on the Saffer-Simpson Hurricane Scale."

Over two million residents had been urged to evacuate. State officials said more than 42,500 stayed at shelters. Many of these were staffed by ham radio operators associated with A-R-E-S and RACES groups.

As Jeanne made her way across Florida, many residents were without telephone service and more than a million people lost power. But ham radio operators using all kinds of emergency power sources were on the air. In fact they were the ones who relayed word of some of the major outages:

"KA4EPS in Deerfield Beach passing on some information you might be interested in. Have some numbers passed along by the local utility company. Dade County has 2900 without power. Broward County 71,000 and Palm Beach County 487,000 without power."

"QSL Lou, Thanks."

The Category 3 storm became the fourth hurricane to pummel Florida in a single season. The three other hurricanes - Charley, Frances and Ivan - have all hit within the last six weeks. And hams like Paul Goodell, KG4GOQ, in the town of Lake Worth might not have sounded that great through all of the radio links, but he did get the word out:

"Estimated winds in excess of 100 miles per hour. Trees bent and laying over."

--

Then for a while there was a period of calm. This as the eye of the storm came ashore. It gave first responders a chance to assess the damage done so far:

--

"KG4YQK at the Port St. Lucie E-O-C W4SLC. We are in the eye of the storm presently. We had sustained winds of well over 110 miles an hour. We received substantial damage here locally. Trees down. Powerlines down. Flooding as well."

hurricanes. As it did, even public service communications took a hit:

"Net control is listening. Go ahead Paul:

"I just heard second han that the communications tower for Riviera Beach has collapsed. Probably not something for the national hurricane Center, but just as a note to anyone else out there listening to hear how bad these winds are going."

By late morning, Jeanne had weakened to a Category 1 storm with 75-mph top sustained winds, but its 400-mile diameter covered most of the central part of the state including Tampa and Orlando. As Jeanne proceeded to fall apart while heading North-East over Georgia and the Carolina's she dumped torrential rain and spawned close to a dozen twisters. More on the aftermath of Hurricane Jean in future Amateur Radio Newsline reports. (ARNewsline(tm) with audio from the VoIP Hurricane Watch Net)

THE BPL FIGHT: PERTH INTERFERENCE NOT BPL RELATED

A widespread interference problem in Perth, Australia, that sounds like B-P-L has to be something else. This, after the city's Power Authority tells Dennis Muldownie, VK6KAD, that it is not using Broadband Over Powerline technology to monitor its electrical network.

There is now some supposition that noise that wiping out free to air TV channels 2, 7, 9 and 10 may be coming from some home network gear which uses the power mains to connect the various pieces in a home Local Area Network. But the noise is so widespread that it has to be more than one installation causing the problem. This, by radiating back out over the local Perth power grid. (WIA News)

THE BPL FIGHT: FCC TO RELEASE R&O ON BPL ROLLOUT

Meanwhile, back at home the ARRL says that an initial Report and Order on the rollout of B-P-L could be on its way out of the FCC this month. Amateur Radio Newsline's Mark Abramowicz, NT3V, has been following the story and has more:

The ARRL says that an initial Report and Order on the rollout of B-P-L could be on its way out of the FCC this month. Amateur Radio Newsline's Mark Abramowicz, NT3V has been following the story and has more…

As predicted almost on cue, the Federal Communications Commission appears ready to render its decision on Broadband Over Powerline Internet access.

And despite thousands of comments on the subject, many of them raising concerns about the interference potential of the technology, the ARRL says it has learned the panel is ready to act.

As one high-ranking ARRL official has told Amateur Radio Newsline, it's not a question of whether there will be BPL. There will. The question is in what form will it be rolled out and how effective will the safeguards be to protect other services.

In its recent bulletin, the ARRL advised it had learned the FCC's Office of Engineering and Technology would have its draft order on BPL ready for the commission's Oct. 14 meeting.

The ARRL has mounted a vigorous information campaign to raise awareness about the threat BPL poses. And, it has also tried to lobby at various levels to change some minds about the benefits the BPL industry says the technology will bring.

But it appears, based on the ARRL's BPL bulletin, that the organization is pessimistic about what will be coming out of the FCC's technology arm.

In fact, the ARRL's Chief Executive Officer David Sumner, K1ZZ, in a letter sent as a follow-up to a recent meeting with FCC commissioner Jonathan Adelstein sums up what the League is expecting.

"…the ARRL has no confidence that the draft report and order will be based on sound engineering and believes the rush to adoption is unwarranted and premature. " That excerpt of Sumner's letter from the ARRL's Bulletin.

In interviews with Amateur Radio Newsline, ARRL President Jim Haynie W5JBP says there was little doubt in his mind the issue would be decided BEFORE the presidential election. Haynie contends the issue is being driven by business interests who have the ear of the president and his technology advisors.

Haynie has told Amateur Radio Newsline of his concerns about the FCC's apparent lack of interest in following up on the many pending BPL complaints - filed as a result of system tests. He has told us he fears when the commission finally acts, it may bow to BPL interests that are seeking to weaken the impact of any interference complaints.

So the question many amateurs may be asking themselves as we await the FCC's order is where will this leave me? Is it time to put my radios up on Ebay and turn my focus to my computer and EchoLink?

The answer: Not so fast!

The National Telecommunications and Information Administration still has a card or two to play. Its technical people have raised interference issues and are continuing studies and plan to release more results in the next several months.

Will the FCC wait for the NTIA? Will the FCC table BPL? Not likely to both. Is there room for an appeal of any FCC BPL decision? If so, it would likely wind up tied up in the federal courts.

With the planned rollout out of Wireless Internet access here in Philadelphia and other cities across the nation, do the economics dictate a utility recovering its investment in BPL technology at a pace investors are willing to wait?

The questions are many and the debate is likely to continue for the next several days.

From our perspective, it seems unlikely the FCC decision - if it goes against amateur radio interests - will stand without a challenge. Too much time and talent has been invested in preparing the data showing what BPL can do to the amateur frequencies and our ability to operate.

We'll stay on top of it for you. And, once the FCC order arrives, we'll have the first reaction and what it will mean to you.

Stay tuned!

THE BPL FIGHT: BPL COMES TO CENTRAL VIRGINIA

Still with news on the B-P-L front, Charles Rivelle, K3FT, has some news about one electric company's future. He says over QRZ.com that the Central Virginia Electric Cooperative has completed testing of its B-P-L system in Nelson County and the company is now serving customers on 40 miles of operational lines.

The K3FT posting provides a link to a two-page advertisement that has been sent to thousands of customers throughout central Virginia. The ad alerts them to look forward to B-P-L service in the area noting that line crews are now installing the equipment needed to deliver Broadband over Powerline services. Up to 4000 homes and businesses will be eligible to participate in the first phase of this program. Central Virginia Electric Cooperative says its "always on" 256 kilobaud per second broadband connection is priced at a very competitive $29.95 a month.

Check this web site for details: http://www.forcvec.com/bplcoop/ (K3FT via QRZ.COM)

THE INTERNET: US FALLING BEHIND IN BROADBAND ROLLOUT

Meantime, the FCC insists that the United States is making progress in rolling out high-speed Internet service. This, despite facts showing that the nation is falling further behind other countries.

A new Federal Communications Commission report found that U.S. high-speed Internet lines had tripled to 28.2 million by the end of 2003 from June 2001, but the country at best was 10th place in international rankings down from fourth, lagging nations like Canada and South Korea.

FCC Commissioner Michael Copps criticized his own agency over the disappointing news. He says that the agency had failed to establish a coherent policy for broadband, sacrificing the nation's rank. Copps also noted that service was as cheap as $10 a month in Japan for 8 megabits a second versus $30-$50 for 1-3 megabits in the United States. (Published news reports)

CHANGING OF THE GUARD: STAN BURGHARDT, W0IT - S.K.

The changing of the guard in ham radio continues with word of the passing of two well known radio amateurs. The ARRL Letter reports that Stan Burghardt, W0IT of Watertown, South Dakota, died on August 22nd at age 93. Burghardt was the founder of Burghardt Radio Supply Inc. which is now known as the Burghardt Amateur Center. He was first licensed in 1931 as W9BJV and became W0BJV in 1946. Burghardt remained active on the air -- especially on 6 meters -- until his death. (ARRL)

CHANGING OF THE GUARD: ROGER BAKER, G4IDE - S.K.

And ham radio software writer Roger Barker, G4IDE, has passed away. Baker died on September 9th following a long bout with cancer. Baker was the author of UI View, PSK31SRV and a host of other digital mode software and was recently named as the first recipient of the 'Lifetime Achievement Award' by the Tucson Amateur Packet Radio for his services to digital communications.

Baker's packet radio program Winpack is currently in use by tens of thousands of radio amateurs around the world, while his UI View program is now considered to be the benchmark by which all other APRS Raster Mapping software is compared. (KB7TBT, G3ZHI, others)

ENFORCEMENT: KEEP OFF 10 METERS

The FCC has written to five trucking and transport companies warning them to keep their drivers from operating radio gear on 10 meters.

The letters went to Con Way CWX Trucking of Long Beach, California; Dowell Express, Inc. of Lavonia, Georgia; K & K Cartage, Inc. in Sunbury, Pennsylvania; Teeberry Trucking LLC whose home base is Charlotte, North Carolina and United Van Lines of Fenton, Missouri. Divers for these companies were heard operating radio gear without licenses on 28.085, 28.115 and 28.215 MHz

Each letter carries a stern warning that continued operation could lead to confiscation of the radio gear as well as a prison term and a hefty fine and for the unlicensed radio operator. These monetary forfeitures normally range from $7,500 to $10,000. (FCC)

ENFORCEMENT: A DEAL A PIRATE COULD'T REFUSE

And there appears to be two ways to get someone to stop rebroacasting your radio station. You can complain to the FCC or you can take another and apparently much quicker route that one station has. Norm Seeley, KI7UP, explains the unique and effective approach:

An unlicensed broadcaster is off the air in San Diegio, California. This, after a licensed broadcaster in San Clemente kind of took matters into its own hands and made the pirate a deal he could not refuse. Legally speaking that is.

When KWVE was recently advised that its signal was being rebroadcast by apparently unauthorized translator station in Lakeside, California, the station dcided to act. Rather than wait for the FCC to investigate and politely ask the pirate to cease and desist, representatives of KWVE paid the party a visit. The station also threatened in writing to seek legal injunction if the unauthorized rebroadcasts continued.

And you can call this approach as being very effective. The translator fell silent in short order and has not been heard since.

While this system is seemingly a lot faster it also means having to hire a lawyer and pay his fee. (CGC)

RESCUE RADIO: FCC PARTICIPATES IN COUNCIL ON EMERGENCY PREPAREDNESS AND INDIVIDUALS WITH DISABILITIES

The FCC has participated in the first meeting of the Interagency Coordinating Council on Emergency Preparedness and Individuals with Disabilities. This, at the Department of Homeland Security in Washington D.C..

The FCC was represented by K. Dane Snowden, the chief of the FCC's Consumer & Governmental Affairs Bureau. At the meeting, Snowden announced that the FCC has issued policies and will launch outreach efforts. This, to ensure that facilities that provide telecommunications relay services for persons with hearing and speech disabilities are designated priority for restoration of service in cases of emergency. Snowden also described a rulemaking by the FCC to improve the emergency alert system to make it more accessible for people with disabilities.

The Interagency Coordinating Council on Emergency Preparedness and Individuals with Disabilities was established by Executive Order on July 22nd. Its purpose is to address the safety and security needs of people with disabilities. (FCC)

HAM RADIO ON THE INTERNET: BIG DATABASE UPGRADE AT QRZ.COM

The QRZ.com website call sign system is running a lot faster these. This as the result of a major an upgrade to a new and more powerful server.

The new database engine is a Sun E280R. This is a 64-bit industrial strength machine with dual 900 MHz processors, 4 GB of RAM, and a pair of 36 gigabyte 10,000 R-P-M Fibre channel disk drives.

Fred Lloyd who runs QRZ.com says that these new disks are really impressive. Fred says that he has clocked them at speeds of up to 64 megabytes per second. That equates to an entire C D ROM's worth of data being moved internally in only 10 seconds.

Lloyd adds that this new server only handles the call sign database. The main QRZ.com web server remains a 450 MHz Sun E420R with 2 gigabytes of RAM. (QRZ.com)

RADIO HERITAGE: NAVY TO CLOSE SUB COMM CENTERS

The United States Navy says that it will dismantle two extremely low frequency radio transmission centers used to communicate with submerged submarines. The Navy says that the 400-million submarine-communications system, which has been in use since 1989, is outdated and no longer needed.

Two transmitter sites are involved. One is in northern Wisconsin and the other in Michigan. They will go out of service on September 30th but could take up to three years to disassemble and close down permanently.

Each system consists of a transmitter and an antenna strung on 600 12 meter high poles. The navy has used these extremely low frequency transmitters to maintain secure communications with submarines at sea but now will use 12 smaller transmitters, sited worldwide. (Pulished reports)

HAM RADIO IN SPACE: ISS REPEATER ON AGAIN

The FM Repeater and BBS on board the International Space Station was again open for general ham radio contacts on September 27th and 28th. During that time voice contacts were available on by transmitting up to the I-S-S on 145.920 MHz with a 67 Hz CTCSS tone while listening for replies on 435.300 MHz. The Bulletin Board used an uplink of 145.860 F-M and a downlink at 435.150 MHz. This operation was followed by a PSK-31 Experimenters Wednesday Test on September 29th.

The system will be on periodically and ARISS will announce the dates and times in advance. Check with the I-S-S Fan Club web page at www.issfanclub.comto see what the latest status is.

Also, keep in mind that the radios on board the space station are not able to correct for Doppler as the frequencies are channelized. It is up to the ground station to do the Doppler correction. For 2 meters, the Doppler shift is about +3kHz at the beginning and goes to about -3kHz at the end. For 70 cm, the Doppler is about +10kHz at the beginning and goes to about -10kHz at the end.

The 70cm Doppler is roughly 3 times the 2m Doppler. Many of the tracking programs have the ability to calculate the frequency shift. (ARISS)

HAM RADIO IN SPACE: MIKE FINCKE ON THE AIR

And as his time on board the I-S-S begins to wind down ham astronaut Mike Fincke, KE5AIT, has been on the air quite a bit. Not only to talk to school students in pre-scheduled contacts, but also to any ham who wants to chat a bit. One of those who had the opportunity to talk recently with the intrepid space traveler is Scott Avery, WA6LIE, in Salinas, California, who had had his recorder running:

Contact audio here. Hear it at www.arnewsline.org

Scott says that his QSO with KE5AIT space mobile took place at about O2:15 on September 28th. Needless to say that signals were 5 by 9 and full quieting both ways.

Fincke and Commander Gennady Padalka, RN3DT will be finishing their tour of duty on the ISS in the middle of October. They will be replaced by Expedition 10 Astronaut Leroy Chiao, KE5BRW, and Cosmonaut Salizhan Sharipov. WA6LIE's full contact with the I-S-S can be heard on line at www.qsl.net/wa6lie (WA6LIE)

DX

In D-X word that Crete will be coming on the air in October. This as SV9FBM and SV9FBZ become active as active as SY9Y in the CQ World Wide DX SSB Contest on the 30th and 31st as a Multi- Single entry. QSL to Stelios Aggelakis, P.O.Box 113, GR 72200 Ierapetra, Crete Island, Greece. (OPDX)

And EA1QF and EB1AA will be on the air from Cuba from October 12th to the 25th. The pair will be working on a "Radiosolidarity" project, but will also be operational on the H-F bands from several station locations as T42R. QSL to EA4URE at his callbook address. (GB2RS)

THAT FINAL ITEM: THE ARDF REPORT

What do Burrowing Owls and 80-meter transmitters have in common? They are both targets of hams who like to do radio direction finding. Newsline's Joe Moell K0OV tells us more:

There's lots happening in the world of radio direction finding this summer. More young Burrowing Owls are leaving their nests in western Florida, so hams in that state who aren't busy with hurricane communications are by their receivers, listening for the radio tag signals to see where these critters will go. If you can help, please join them -- I'll tell you how in a moment.

Also, a 21-member delegation of ARDF Team USA competitors, trainers, jurors, and family members went to the Czech Republic and the World Championships of radio foxhunting, September 7th through the 12th. These World ARDF Championships take place every two years. USA's 2004 team members were OMs and YLs ranging in age from 19 to 62. Among them was Jay Thompson W6JAY, Newsline's Young Ham of the Year for 2003 and recent winner of the ARRL Hiram Percy Maxim Award. Each competed once on 80 meters and once on two meters, looking for three, four or five transmitters, depending on age and gender category.

USA began attending the World Championships in 1998, but European and former Soviet countries have been holding ARDF events for over 30 years. So it's no surprise that they dominated in the final standings. Nine of these nations garnered all of the individual and team medals. The total medal count was led by Czech, Russia, and Ukraine with 34, 28 and 26 respectively.

USA, Australia, and Great Britain were among the 19 nations that won no medals. But we're getting better every year. Two Team USA members had top-ten individual finishes in their categories. Nadia Scharlau of Cary, NC took 6th place out of 22 on two meters. She might have won a medal on 80 meters, but the battery fell out of her receiver and she had to find the last fox transmitter with just the bearings that she already had on her map, losing about ten minutes. Bob Cooley KF6VSE, age 62, of Pleasanton, CA placed 9th out of 34 on his two-meter run.

All of our team members earned their spots by taking medals in the USA National Championships. This year's were in California in June, and a site is already being sought for the national championships in 2005, 2006 and beyond. As USA's ARDF Coordinator, I would like to hear from you if your club is interested in putting on the championships.

You can read all about the ARDF championships, Team USA, and volunteer wildlife tracking -- and find out how to get involved -- at the usual place, www.homingin.com. That's homingin, as one word, homingin.com.

From southern California, this is Joe Moell K-zero-Oscar-Victor, for Amateur Radio Newsline.

Again, that website Joe mentioned is www.homingin.com. And homingin is one word. (K0OV, ARNewsline(tm))

My answer is the same as given by Twistedhed when asked the same question:

"I own many radios. Unlike yourself, because I mention a single brand, doesn't mean it's all I have or use, but attempted education of an insane person is useless. "

..if you have problems with that see Twisty LOL

dogie never fails to show his true colors, does he? Even when feigning some semblance of rational behavior, his true motives are crystal clear. Even this (N8's) latest (bogus) head shrink angle, is laughably absurd. The AKC's had their day, all thats left now are the loony leftovers of the grammer school playground/never grew up, and never will, gang.

Heh. You can't even spell Diesel correctly...

Oh, and as for you being/not being george... your "nickname" here says you are.. Double-negative and all that. "I am not I am not George" implies that you are, indeed George. So if you're not George, then who are you?

According to old posts the words keyclown, antikeylclown and AKC was first used by Doug and later picked up by aaron and others. And BTW Dougs ideas are far from absurd because dwight, Dave hall, Jerry o., leland scott, Frank G, kevin munzler, and many many more, at one time every ham in here including many cbers posted in support of AKC ideals if not there practices. Those people with old scores to settle are trying to do a political hatchet job on N8 by posting all kind of crazy shit meanwhile ignoring mopedholic who is actually breaking the law by phone, email and physical harassment of N8 and leland.

No debate there. Doug is a loon, and his practices alone caused him to be ousted.

Are you serious? Your blabbing on about full disclosure from cb'ers, well what about you? Is it ok for -you- to hide -your- identity?
Obviously you're being hypocritical just for shits and giggles.. but c'mon dood! Why do you work so hard at being completely laughable??
Is it because your dogie's little lapdog, and it's your duty?? LOL!

Partially, well, that and lack of self esteem. You know the type...the ones that run around behind someone, following them just to have SOMETHING to hang on to, be it right, wrong, or sane. They have no fortitude to go it alone. They are sheep in the utmost sense...no intellect, no ability to think for themselves, and no better sense to know when to give up.

N8 took the original pro-legal intent, and turned it into a cruel joke.
It would be unwise and down right silly, at this point, for you to spin it any other way.. Heres a tissue 4 ya, google-puppet. Facts are facts.

Why do you post through Google? Is it the fact that after you pay for your lame dialup account you can't afford anything more? Or, is it the fact that you've been canned by most Usenet providers?

Dwight Stewart had absolutely nothing to do with the AKC. I used his name as misinformation to expose the person who was forging and intercepting private emails between myself and Voobner. I picked Stewart because he -didn't- post to rrcb, and his position on similar issues would make a gullible person swallow the bait without checking for a hook, which is exactly what happened.

In any case, the source of the misinformation was Phil Covington, who has since been publically disgraced, TOSsed from his ISP, ousted from the group, and will be in for a major legal hassle if he so much as thinks about pulling that kind of stunt again.

And FWIW, I'm still not a ham although Voobner and a couple others have tried to convert me.

Using your own logic, what should we think about a country that would put an insane nazi like Hitler in charge? Should we assume you are all insane?

That's where you show your ignorance. I'm not German. I don't live there.
I don't even live on that continent.

Thank goodness there are people like you to think for people like me.
Without your extra-contextual interpretation I would have -never-understood the meaning of Kerry's statement. In my ignorance I assumed Kerry meant that any pre-emptive attack should be justifiable in the eyes of both the American people and the international community, which is the reason nobody pushed the big red button during the cold war. But alas, the errors in my thinking processes are now clear, thanks to you. I see now that Kerry meant the president should act like a small child before the UN, holding up one finger to go pee, two fingers to go poo, etc, etc.

Good God, think of the anarchy that would result if you hadn't pointed out the pitfalls of using logic and common sense!

No real efforts on my part. Just pointing out why it appears you are from Germany. I mean aside from your rediculous statments. Otherwise, don't really give a shit where you're from (unless it's France HA HA).

No matter. Someday, where ever you are, your silly little government will screw up yet again and need a helping hand from a country that is well known for giving without question and yes, we will be there to give it to you.

I think someone once mentioned getting help with Iraq (not that we need it) and what was that sound I heard?.... oh yeah, crickets. Glad to have allies like you. Yep, you're right. One day we'll need help and just like now, I don't think the likes of you will be there to offer. But you will be there with your hand out like everyone else and we are more than happy to give... no matter how many times you refuse to help us.

So in the end, no matter what you think of us, we know what our tax payers have to give up for you even when you do nothing for us. That's the way it's always been and that's the way it's always going to be. And no amount of stupidities coming from you will change that.

It's not self inflicted. His brother and sister were of somewhat similar mental capacity when they conceived him.

ROTFLMFAO!!!!
Of course he's Geo, why would he always reply? Because he's Geo. Why would he even care what anyone says about Geo, if he not Geo, because he's Geo.

Hello,

This is a WARNING NOTICE from the SBC Internet Services (SBCIS) Policy department, regarding abusive, offensive and/or harassing emails/postings sent from your SBCIS account.

It has been brought to our attention that you are posting on the internet newsgroups with a known AOL user as you're account information RE: wa3moj@aol.com. Said individual has forwarded a complaint concerning these posts.

Be advised it is a violation of our Terms of Service
(http://sbc.yahoo.com/terms/)and Acceptable Use Policy (http://support.sbcglobal.net/legal/aup.shtml) to use our service to email or post, threatening, abusive, obscene, hateful, or otherwise objectionable material.

If additional complaints are received concerning your SBCIS account, it will be TERMINATED, and you may incur an early termination fee.

Sincerely,
The SBCIS Policy Department

Geo SAID he was WA3MOJ, and he made posts with his call at the bottom.

>I never said i was wa3moj,

http://tinyurl.com/6r8a9

Yup, it was him

Oh,,a DIFFERENT "Geo"....lmao!

>you guys annointed me with the name. just >happened to have a few mixed letters and >characters at the end of a post, you took that >as some sorta identity,

Sure. When shark used the same coincidental "mixed characters and letters" at the end of his post, it was acted upon as a forge by his isp and there is only one manner in which this was accomplished: wa3moj complained, but you claim he never posted here :).

>what about Dick didnt he said i was geo too?

Dick said WA3MOJ was "simply insane".

Addressing him by his call is his worst nightmare, >addressing me with someone elses call is a >joke I laugh heartily every single time.

>k8alp

And complain when someone else (like shark) uses those "mixed letters and characters".

Oh, don't worry Twist. He's been bagged & tagged for years now. Of course he's a ham operator that doesn't even talk on a cb, but yet trolls the CB newsgroup......LOL!!!

All of the above is patently false. I am not Aaron Voobner and did not know anything about the garbage above until I received an email message today from a person in this newsgroup. I did not post under any of those assumed names (Aaron Voobner or whatever), not have I ever posted, in any newsgroup at any time, under an assumed or false name.

I'm no longer involved in any form of communications radio today, including both Ham and CB radio. Therefore, I no longer post to any of the radio-related newsgroups, most certainly including this one. Regardless, I continue to receive email messages, some threatening and harassing, relating to the use of my name in this newsgroup. My family, who shares my email address, have also been subjected to these email messages. I've asked some of those using my name in this newsgroup to stop and have changed my email address twice in the last two years in an effort to stop those messages, both without success.

This must stop. Therefore, I'm asking once again for everybody to stop using my name in this newsgroup and stop posting false information about me. This message is not a joke and this situation is not funny. Please stop.

Yes Keyclowns persecuted dwight stewart with no proof whatsoever and that is what makes them keyclowns. They arent the sharpest knifes in the drawer. That is only a drop in the bucket compared to what they attempt to do to N8 and leland Scott, instigated by steveo and twathead. Imagine a keyclown like mopedope comes to your house to visit. Threatens you and takes photos of your home looks up names of people who work with you and posts them. And what is the reason the mopedopes of rrcb do this? because they get told the truth - that they are illegal cbers. And they are called gay. So what, normal people would laugh and then killfile, etc but not these guys. they dont realize Doug has been posting for 5 yrs now and with all they are doing to him do they think he will ever stop now? a guy like that never gives up. the Keyclowns give him 100 reasons a day to come back year after year and torment them.

You're almost as good at reading headers as your chickenshit fugly hero N8WWM is. He has me posting from a Michigan ISP now.

What a couple of buffoons you two are, no wonder you worship the fugly felon.

I'll put it bluntly for you. Ever wondered why 911 occured on your turf?
You should be questionning yourself about what your country has been doing to bring this on to its people. So chew on that.

Help in Iraq. Yeah. Went there unilaterally spitting in allies faces and still doing it as in one of yesterday's Bush speeches. Now asking for help.
Way to go. Your redneck administration has such a way with diplomacy that its chasing your allies. Think about it.

Who isn't smitten with Curious George? Whether you're 70, 47, or 4 years old, the inquisitive little fellow who always seems to get into one scrape after another has, in all likelihood, captured your heart.

Perhaps his popularity lies in the predictability of his unpredictability.
You know that the second the man with the yellow hat leaves the house, warning George to be careful, George is going to get into trouble. And when George starts getting into trouble, he only digs himself deeper.

Frank;
I have often thought the same thing. I have a 800 gph pump in my pond that is an induction motor. Really nothing to wear out other than the shaft.

I need to know the proper MaxPhysPage setting for the system.ini for WFWG 3.11. I have 20Mb of physical RAM (20352Kb). The format is:

16Mb of RAM. I have an 11Mb Perm Swap file, but when I start windows,
I have only 23Mb free. Any help is greatly appreciated.

You provide more entertainment than a freakshow tent at the carnival you stoopid fuckchop. LOL

The person who posts as moparholic@hotmail.com put up a link to pics of Dougs house doug confirms he was harased at his door by someone calling himslef peepeeholic. The plate on the car was the same one seen on the secruity vid at Lelands house. Plate traces to Peebles so moparholic = peebles and if not then peebles will lead to the ID of moparholic LOL either way hes screwed blued and tatoed.

You're dogies lap dog, and yet you sort of admitted or suggested that your whack job leader, N8, has absolutly NO concept of self control.

ROTFLMAO!!!!! OMG This is too funny.

"because they get told the truth - that they are illegal cbers. And they are called gay. So what, normal people would laugh and then killfile, etc but not these guys."

LMFAO!!!! This from George Busch WA3MOJ, who still, every time someone mentions him, he falls all about himself say, "I'm not George" Too funny. This from someone that doesn't own or by his own admission, "I'm not a Cb'er" talk on a CB radio.

Right out of the AKC playbook.. snip, edit, obfuscate, change the context, project, fabricate, deceive, make shit up out of whole cloth, typical everyday, AKC rules of engagement, etc.

Soooooo laughably predictable, as usual.. <<YAWN>>

Try to focus your mind Randy I know its hard after years fighting your addiction to the white monster as you told about in alt.drug once. We can get those posts if you like. what my lil bro is trying to tell you is that if someone says freebanding is illegal you or one of your socks will say it is no worse than jaywalking or speeding etc.

Cocaine is nothing but BAD. The people who say they can control IT are lying to themselves, or don't have the money to spend on it. Been there, done that, got the t-shirt and the record to prove it. It started as a small amount, maybe twice a month,circa1985. Then ecalated rapidly to an eighth of an ounce or more a week. I realize this doesn't appear to be alot to people without jobs, but to a person with a 8 to 5, safety sensitive job, it is alot of missed sleep. At first, the sex was great, did it more ways than the law allows. But this rapidly faded into nothing. The major concern just becomes getting more of the shit. When the supply of powder became harder to locate in this area, crack was always available. So, this became the easiest way for me. Did that for about 5 years before being caught in a suviellance camera and getting arrested. Got 4 years defferred ajudication, meaning that if I don't get in trouble for the time on probation, I will have no conviction on my record. Just recently finished that sucessfully. Actually, in Texas, you can get off probation by doing all your community service(120 hours for me), and doing 1/3 of the time, which I did. Cost of my fun, about $7500 for the lawyer and the probation fees.

You know, the bad part is that I still crave the shit. But, now I know the white monster is always lurking in the back of my mind, and I cannot surrender to the call.

Incidentally, I did lose one friend I grew up with, to suicide, directly related to cocaine. Also, a co-worker aqquired AIDS through the sharing of needles while injecting the shit. That was in the early days of AIDS, when everyone thought they would never get it. He is DEAD now.

In closing, the only real advice I have for anyone thinking of trying the shit is.....PLEASE DON'T DO IT! DON'T DO IT FOR ME, THOSE THAT LOVE YOU, YOUR WIFE, HUSBAND, GIRLFRIEND OR BOYFRIEND. IN SHORT, DON'T EVER TRY COKE. IT IS NOTHING BUT A FELONIOUS WASTE OF MONEY.

I can't make it any more simple than that.

See Ya, Randy

Good job, George! I knew you knew how to use punctuation! Now, the question remains...why do you write like an idiot here?

Actually, I just got to the point that I felt nothing for her. Didn't want to sleep with her, didn't care if she came home, etc. I picked the kids up from daycare, fed them, made sure their homework was done, bathed them, saw them to bed, etc. Our divorce was a blessing. We are friends now.

She was/is a hypochondriac that finally found a doctor to ruin her marginal back for good. Most doctors told her not to have surgery and people tried to tell her not to have it done, but she would not listen. Now she pays for it daily. She now has a bunch of metal in her lower back, more pain than she ever had before, and nerve damage as well.

Nowadays, she is on meds so strong that they are the ones reserved for usually terminal cancer patients. I forget what it's called, but it comes in a patch form.

Now, stop acting a fool!

Anyone who does not take the time to judge by other means than misplaced paranoia is NOT one I'd call a friend. There are no reasons for concern, and there is no more commentary to be issued from me on this subject.
It figures that you would not choose to approach me personally about this, as this is the wont of people of such mean spirited stripe.
If you care about any form of friendship with me just leave it lie.
You and Marian are operating with an unfounded prejudice that is my choice to neither further acknowledge or tolerate.
Doug
PS I know you haven't the wherewithal to do so anyway, but this lets you off the hook: Dont bother replying. If I want this kind of garbage going on in my life I can always go talk to my ex-wife.

who cares about historical context of 2nd amendment? Are we going to be protected if we give up our guns? NOT.
Thats the name of the tune, not some stupid debate about protecting the world from gangbangers and psychos.
I can see it now: "Please Mr. gangbanger, dont hurt us...take our valuables, take our cars, just dont hurt us...we DONT have guns"
Not in my home baby.....

Not hard at all if he is that damn stupid to publicly post his E-mail address. Seems to a lack of brain power in the AKC. He changes his e-mail, then publicly posts it and then you defend his idiot actions.

Lick your own dogs balls, he used to your tongue.

Enclosed are recordings of violations on the repeater by N8WWM. The transmissions continued for a considerable time and there was no evidence of a control operator.

I used to own a '65 Corvair, which I took the little boxer-6 out of the back, capped the diff, took out the back seats, cut a hole in the floorpan, put in a cage and cross member, and dropped an LT1 in where the back seats used to be.

Granted, there was a bit more to the conversion than that, but there's the basics.

I hear ya about new nameplates not meaning what the old ones did..

A '66 mustang is a classic, and due the respect that such a classic deserves.. I'll just always prefer GM steel. Personal preference, that's all.

Heh. No. Actually I own a Ford LTLA9000 and a Peterbilt 379 EXHD. The Ford is pre-Freightliner/Sterling buyout, and the Pete is a Paccar product.

GM doesn't make a Semi-type product that will do the job I need it to do.

The Ford's a nice truck, too. In fact, I'm looking for a decent driver to put in it so we can both make some money.

Gred:

1. I only use this address and nickname on the newsgroups.
2. It's "your sock puppet", not "you're". "You're" is a contraction of "you are" and does not denote possession. "Your" is the possessive form of "you", which is probably what you intended to use, but didn't, for whatever reason.
3. I don't have a sock puppet, nor do I need one. Anyone with half a brain can figure out who I am from the posts I make to this NG. I have nothing to hide.

Yes, the purpose was to change the email addresses known in this group, not hide from the world as a whole. I receive many email messages each month, with absolutely no problem from anyone other than those in this newsgroup convinced I'm Aaron Voobner causing trouble here under assumed identities. It appears they're convinced of that exactly because they've been told so by people in this newsgroup.

Some of those messages are actual threats from people having arguments in this newsgroup with a person they're convinced is Voobner. In one case, a person followed me from newsgroup to newsgroup for almost three weeks, posting replies to each of my messages accusing me of being Voobner. When he would not stop after being asked in the newsgroups, I sent perhaps half a dozen email messages asking what evidence would be acceptable to him to prove I'm not Voobner. I even sent my phone number, hoping a person to person talk would convince him. He did eventually stop, but only after that effort on my part.

Why don't you tell the whole story? You followed me from newsgroup to newsgroup for well over two weeks posting replies to each of my messages accusing me of being Aaron Voobner causing trouble for people in the CB newsgroup. When I denied that in those groups and you flatly refused to stop after being asked, I only then sent the email messages asking you to stop and repeatedly asking what evidence you would accept to prove I'm not Voobner. I know you think it was a great big funny joke, but, as I told you then, I'm not Voobner and did absolutely nothing to you to deserve the harassment you put me through for those several weeks.

Ok, let's take this from a different angle..... try to find just one post where Dwight Stewart showed half the wit and creativity that Voobner did in those hilarious screenplay-format dialogs (which should have given you a clue as to Voobner's home 20).

Dwight isn't Voob.

I changed the email addresses known in these newsgroups. Since I don't post to this newsgroup, people had to make the effort to search elsewhere to find the new email addresses. Of course, people would not make that effort, and then send harassing or threatening email, if my name was not repeated over and over again in this newsgroup. It has never happened in any other newsgroup.

Wow... I'm surprised to see so many old names pop out of the woodwork.
Good to hear from you all. I can't believe they are still talking about Voobner! He wasn't worth discussing a year ago... lol SSB... I only wish I had time to work on radio stuff. I was laid off my job about one year ago and was a bum for about five months. Things have been turbulent ever since. Maybe it'll settle down again and I can get back to my hobby. I did work on a new automotive product during this time that has become sucessful. That has taken over most of my spare time for now. Good to hear from you!

Dwight what happened to you is typical, this steveo guy has a history of harassing people on the internet.In the last year he targeted Leland Scott and Doug Adair going so far as to show up at there homes to challenge them to fight. he spends all his time looking up court records, ebay feedback names of spouses and using this info to harass his victims.

Yes, really. I clicked on the google link and found my name mentioned in dozens of messages posted in this newsgroup, but had to go all the way back to 2001 to find one actually posted by me.

No, that's realistic. Since I got an email message from a person in this newsgroup, there's no point hiding a known address. Instead, if the threats and harassment start, I'll have to change addresses once again.

Sorry, I just don't agree with that. I've posted in the newsgroups for almost a decade using my real name and email address, with very few problems outside this newsgroup. Since the modified email address virtually eliminates spam, this one newsgroup alone continues to be the main source of problems. And it's not due to anything I've posted here. I don't think I've posted anything in this newsgroup in almost three years and perhaps only posted a handful of messages per year prior to that. Instead, the problems are caused by others repeatedly posting my name in this newsgroup in association with stuff I'm not even aware of until I eventually hear about it in my email. As such, I would probably experience the same problems even I never posted to the newsgroups (using any email address - real or fake).

OK heres the keyclown playbook, you guys harassed dwight stewart for months with no proof whatsoever that he was voob. Same thing you did to Leland, no proof he did anything to you, yet you harassed him. Your head honcho Twistynuts decided Frank was N7VCF and the harassment of that ham began. So the person you call "george" let drop some meaningless numbers and letters in a post one day and suddenly you start harassing WA3MOJ. Again, no proof, no evidence, just heresay.

Well, in total, 66% of this newsgroup is easily filterered crap. I would say that at least another 25% is a bit harder to filter by subject, but is crap just the same.
Look through the figures below, you will see that I do not read much from many of the people on here. OK, so I read less than 1% of twisty's posts... but, whatever you come out smelling of - they won't be using to make perfume, that's for sure.

Until you change your "nic", you are generally in my filter by name, as are several other posters on this group - purely because the posts are rarely of any benefit to the group or readers. When you change your "nic", the new one goes in the filter. Your posts may not be as offensive as certain people on here, but it is almost all just arguments.

For the useful content in their posts, I may as well do the same with Richard Cranium, Chim Bubba, and Twistedhed. Nothing against the chaps, just that I don't have the time to drudge through megabytes of crap looking for that one good post.

Six of one, half a dozen of the other.

Now, for the figures...

I put many subjects in the filter, incuding for sale and Ebay subjects.

Because the person made it very clear who was writing the messages, because we exchanged email for several days, and because, if you read the other messages in this thread, you will see he has commented here on that very exchange.

Well, since you weren't involved in anything being discussed, absolutely nobody is keeping you from going about your business in this newsgroup without any regard for the things said here.

Actually, after re-reading his messages, I don't see how anyone could possibly come to that conclusion. If you read my messages in other newsgroups, you will quickly see I've never shyed away from using my real name when expressing my views, no matter what the discussion. Therefore, I would have no reason whatsoever to use a fake name in this newsgroup to simply talk about something relating to radio equipment (legal or otherwise).

Further, you have those literally hundreds of messages posted by me over the years to compare to those he posted. If you read back over his messages, you'll find him using words, phrases, and comments, I've never used even once in all those other messages (and possibly in my entire life for that matter). Of course, if you still believe I posted his messages after that, then you must also believe I was able to avoid the words, phrases, and comments, he used in this newsgroup in all of those other messages posted by me in the other newsgroups over a nearly ten year period. I suggest that would be nearly impossible to do.

Finally, if you check more carefully, you'll notice that I was occasionally posting messages in other newsgroups at nearly the same time he was posting messages here. For example, on June 24, 2002, we both posted messages in two different newsgroups within minutes of each other. We also posted other messages at around that same time, still in different newsgroups.

> (snip) and don't try and play me by > saying you are out of radio (snip)

If you check my radio web site...

http://www.qsl.net/w5net/

...you'll notice it was taken down months ago. If you check eBay...

http://cgi.ebay.com/ws/eBayISAPI.dll?ViewItem&item=5707014692

...you'll find the auctions where I sold my radio equipment. And, finally, if you search the Amateur radio newsgroups, you'll find several announcements of those auctions along with a discussion about why I decided to leave radio.

I just purchased a Cobra 19 DX III and a 36" base loaded magnet mount antenna. So far I'm picking up pretty good, and transmitting well also. I don't think I'm getting out there as far as i can. Most likely this Friday I will be purchasing a Wilson 1000 Magnet Mount to replace the antenna I have now. Is that going to get me out there a little more (the wilson 1000) No modifications have been made to this radio and have not been able to find any either. I purchased it brand new at a Pilot Truckstop, and am sure it is only putting out 4 watts (fcc required). Will the Wilson make me receive further or transmit further or both, or neither? I'm new and feel it all has to do with how much your getting out (4 watts doesn't seem to good)

Maybe I don't need a new radio, maybe the wilson 1000 will do what I want it to do. I get so sick of losing communication once I'm not close to truckers anymore. What do I need to do? I want to make sure i am getting out as far as possible.

My other dilemma:

I've been looking here http://www.wilsonantennas.com/cobracb.shtml at some of the radios and the three that have caught my eye are:

Cobra 29 LTD Night Watch Classic

Cobra 25 LTD Classic

Cobra 148 GTL Classic

The site also offers two tuning options before shipping. Which one should I go for? Seems like the Mega Tune. One more question below as well. The tuning options are:

The Mega Tune 29.99

Our Mega Tune is designed to provide you with loud booming audio while still maintaining a clean and clear signal. If you looking to sound raspy or bleed over many channels this defiantly isn't the modification for you. Our techs have worked very hard to perfect this modification. The mega tune will not void any factory warranties, it will not damage your radio and it will not make your radio run warmer than normal. We also do not remove or disable any part of the AMC or ALC circuit. We do upgrade various parts of the audio circuit with higher wattage or better quality parts. We also do a few other modifications that make the radios wave form, when viewed on an oscilloscope more linear. This means of course you will sound as loud as possible while still maintaining maximum clarity. If you are looking for maximum performance from your radio we recommend you have us perform this modification. We also completely warranty all work performed by our service department. The mega tune will also increase your peak power. Dual final radios after being mega tuned typically put out over 40 watts and single final radios typically put out over 30 watts.

The True Tune 10.00

Our True Tune is like a basic peak and tune. When you receive your radio that have been True Tuned by Premiere Electronics you can rest assured that your radio is operating at it's maximum efficiency. We go through your radio and re-align the transmitter section. The reason this is necessary is because from the factory most radios just aren't working at their best. The factories don't have the time to sit down with every radio and precisely tune it. They generally get it in the ball park, but if you are interested in performance, you need the true tune. Every modification we perform is backed up with our unbeatable warranty! Like always, none of our work will void any factory warranties.

Last question: The one that bugs me.

I purchased a SWR Meter from Radio shack. It was the cheapest one they had and I am on a budget here, because some they had were way to expensive. The one I got was http://www.radioshack.com/product.asp?catalog%5Fname=CTLG&product%5Fid=21-534 I took it back because nothing seemed to make much difference, or I wasn't operating it right, seemed to always fall in the red. The antenna I have the only way to adjust is to move antenna up and down. Maybe I wasn't in a good location. I finally got it to 2.3, and just left it. My question is was I operating it right to finally get a 2.3 or is that just a cheap ass SWR Meter?

I really hope someone has the time to answer and help out a newbie as I am very interested in Cb's since i finally broke down and got me one. I just want to be able to transmit and receive as far as possible without breaking the law to bad. Not ready for a amplifier or anything like that.

I seem to like the site I am planning on purchasing from unless someone out here tells me there is no need for another radio because the Wilson 1000 will do what i want. I guess the reason i also like them is that they will tune and get everything running just right before they ship it. I know that wasn't done to the one I have now.

If you want to email me feel free. casanova2u2@yahoo.com

Good Morning George,
I see you do want my attention, that's why you changed your screen name. I do not wish to see your posts, no matter what you post, good or bad, that is the reason that I have kill filed everyone of your nics. If my posts bother you so, kill file me, I haven't changed my screen name in almost a year or better yet, ignore me.
I am asking again, please stop changing your screen nics to purposely by pass filters. I do save each post, complete with headers when you do that, remember Comcast sent you a warning about doing that, so if you continue I'm sure others including myself will complain.

There are not "many" of me. There is only one of me, George, but I understand how you can be under the impression there are several of me,as you always give the impression that everyone is against you, you claim everyone you exchange with is a liar, and you blame whoever is engaged in your exchange of dialog at the

Actually, if you laughed it off, those who call you by your correct call would probably cease. The fact of the matter is, those you whine about the most have managed to push your buttons in a manner you have yet to match.

>There your attempts to lie angain twist

You maintain you are not Geo. If this is true, then you forged a valid "legitimate" call in your post that you call "inadvertant letters and numbers". The hypocrisy is lost upon you, but fortunate for you, I am once again enlightening you via the pointing out your inability to see and examine your own behavior.

I've lost nothing to you at any time, but if it soothes that ego of yours I single-handedly destroyed.....
The call you posted was a valid call sign, as per the FCC, so this discounts any "random" or "mixed up letters" you claimed to invoke. Nevertheless, I am more than satisfied with your apology, as you only make such nervous quotes when you have had your

Sure.....one expects hammie radio operators, especially those who have made claims they are due respect by virtue of their license and time in hammie radio, to be somewhat familiar with hammie and communications law, no? N3CVJ maintained when the FCC sends you a notice detailing a violation,,,"that's it. you're guilty", except, of course, when he reversed his opinion AFTER Dogie was caught and began circulating bullshit about how Dogie was probably framed because of his "numerous enemies". Never mind the recordings Riley had in his possession of N8 breaking numerous hammie laws that were sent to him by several parties, some of who had never heard of N8WWM until he made his presence known by jamming. Hall lobbied vehemently for N8WWM's innocence. In one post he says he was never involved with N8, in another he claims he was "sucked into N8's Bullshit". This guy makes Kerry and Bush look like candidates with steadfast positios.
Besides, I don't have to..the FCC did that on the Rain Report. Your argument continues to be with the FCC,,,they said he was found to be jamming repeaters and interference, for some odd and unsettling personal reason, you choose not to believe the FCC regarding this single event, but invoke their rules left and right and maintain N8's innocence,,only two people have done that,,N3CVJ and N8WWM..

All domestic CB radios are rated at 4 watts. Unless you are running an amplifier, no one radio will significantly "put out" any better than another. What you use for an antenna, though, is a different story.
The antenna will make a much bigger difference in signal than the radio. Generally speaking, the longer the antenna, the better it performs. The largest CB mobile antenna, is a 9' whip. If mounted in the center of a the vehicle, there isn't much that can touch it.

These are fairly nice radios, although there are continual rumors of diminished quality due to their place of manufacture. A better alternative would be the Uniden line of radios. My favorite is the Grant.

Run, don't walk away from peak jobs. They do nothing more than remove your hard earned money and put it into someone else's hands. All that is usually involved is peaking the power output for maximum, and removing or reducing the affects of the modulation limiter. I won't go into the math here but in order to see even 1 "S" (signal) unit increase on another guy's meter, your radio would have to put out 4 times as much power as it did stock. It is VERY difficult to get 16 watts of dead key power from a 4 watt CB. It cannot be done by alignment alone. By the time someone "redesigns" the transmitter and replaces the parts necessary to get up to 16 watts, you are left with a radio that may very well be less reliable, or may have a dirty or unstable transmitter.

If you truly want to get a boost in output power, you are better off with an amplifier. Yes, an amplifier is illegal as heck, but so is a peak job.

That meter should do the job. How were you using it? To check SWR, you need to set it to the "CAL" position. Key the mike on your radio and adjust the calibrate knob on the meter to the red cal line at the right of the scale. Then switch to SWR and read the reflected power on the SWR scale. A good performing antenna will have an SWR less than 2:1 (1.5:1 preferable)

Hope that helps...

Hi All,

I am looking for some parts for a penetrator HB-140 amp.

I'm looking for the circuit board that connects the switches on the front of the amp.

Anyone got one of these amps laying around??? for parts?

If so, Give me a hollar... the e-mail address is good.

homerboy49@yahoo.com

thanks,

gary

Is that why you mentioned it (file transfers)? To find something pc related of which I was not capable? For crying out loud, you are really feeling depressed there, Davie.

>No, just following up on a hunch......

Make up your mind,..a "sure bet" doesn't equal the bump on your back herein referred as "a hunch".

Yes and no. Personally I don't have the hardware to do that. Webtv can most certainly upload pictures in the same manner you do, they just need more external components.

>Now this is nice. A civil discussion. Now why >do you have to ruin it by resorting to personal >affronts like you degenerated to below?

I guess because over the years ninety nine point nine percent of your posts up until you were made aware of outside eyes watching, have been of an insultive and demeaning nature, especially when you disagreed with someone. Your longest running gag has been your calling of dxers "felons", using the convenient but oh-so-ignorantly wrong excuse of "Well, if the shoe fits" as means of illustrating YOUR ignorance of what constitutes a felon verses a civil infract. Moving on with your lies hypocrisy,and self-contradictions, you have whined and complained those who badger N8 about getting busted" are no better than he, yet you have badgered people and harassed them, unjustly and incorrectly calling them felons because you are ignorant and clueless as to what constitutes a felon. Wanna-be-physician, heal thy-self.

allow yourself this simple explanation.... you and "Geo" are the ONLY ones to ever post regarding intimate knowledge of Lancaster (Amish Country).......example: speaking of the previous ownership of Zinn's on Route 30.

>If Landshark has already "proven to the >masses" that "george" is really wa3moj, then

>why accuse me?

By virtue the process of elimination. "Geo" denies he is Geo (forget his call sign for the moment)....that leaves ONLY you, exhibited by the fact you two are the only ones with any intimate knowledge of the area in question around Lancaster.

>The only 2 that YOU are aware of.

No slithering permitted. The ONLY TWO THAT EVER made posts concerning the area in this group. Try again with another lie when you feel cornered and overwhelmed. Of course , you can always place an end to your self-tormented lies by merely citing the non-existent particiapnts in rec.radio.cb other than yourself and Geo that have intimate knowledge of the area as discussed. But then again, asking you to provide is often met with hostility and smoke.

>I'm sorry if you are unable to comprehend that >there may be other people here who you are >unaware of.

I am quite satisfied with what you have presented.

>Let's analyze this statement for a second shall >we?

Sure,,but, of course, you understand, if there was no validity to it, it would have been tossed out the window...but your ego will not permit it, as what others think (right now, myself) dictates your behavior, for some odd and unsettled reason.

>You conclude that the person posting as

>"George" has to be either WA3MOJ or me,

I didn't conclude it, I surmised it.

>Semantics.

It's not. If I concluded it, I would have said so and said it was definite. I didn't. I said IF it wasn't Geo , it was you.

>Exactly, you said it was either MOJ or me. A >definite conditional conclusion.

What is this "condition" you speak of that only you can see??
Your quickness to jump and latch onto this tells me you probably have a hand in his dirty barrel of filth.

>How you derive that logic from my statements >is curious to say the least.

The only thing curious USED to be your self-contradictions, but even that has been shown by your willingness to lie and play two sides of the fence to harass others to be nothing more than an old game of which you are no longer adept.
Your threat leaves me no doubt your involvement and harassment level of participation.

>A flawed based on paranoid and faulty logic.

Your logic consists of saying those who continue to "speak" of Dogie's crimes are no better than he, yet you maliciously and incorrectly (via your ignorance of FCC law) continued to call others (cbers) felons for the mere act of dxing.
Once again, I am perfectly satisfied of the position you continue to present of yourself.

Your defending of N8WWM when he was busted jamming and your saying the FCC could be wrong and that Keith may have framed Dogie leaves little doubt to the rest of the world your agenda and position.

>Is your Alzheimers kicking in again?

Hehehe,,,what were you saying of "personal affronts"? That's ok, Dave, if your self-esteem is dictating this is panic-mode again and you need invoke that part of you that soothes the ego by playing the part of Dr.
Walter Mitty.

>You accused me of blaming Keith on the last >reluctantly were forced to admit that I never >used his name.

Post it.

> Now you bring it up again?

>based solely on the basis of our geographical

>proximity to Lancaster Pa.?

You saying Keith could have framed Dogie has nothing to do with Lancaster. Misinterpretations have always been your forte, Mr. dx-felon, man.
I based it on you are the only two to have EVER posted here regarding information of Lancaster.

>What kind of logic is that? Do you think that, >right now, MOJ and I are the ONLY people on >this board who know anything about Lancaster >Pa.?

No,,,those were your words, pay attention, as I already said once what is fact...it doesn't matter what "I" think. Yet, has you worried and concerned to the point of you fretting and asking what I think.
Fact: ONLY you and Geo have posted regarding intimate details of the area. ADd all the "ifs" and "mays" you wish. It doesn't change the fact that only you and Geo have posted of such.

>And that precludes anyone else from living

>here and knowing something about the area?

Not at all, but there is no unknown factor here. The IP number is constant regardless what he chooses to refer himself and thiat IP number matches countless harassing posts, in addition to speaking on depth on several occasion of the area.

>Oh, now we're moving on to the IP number. Is >it MY IP number?

Since you asked, yes, many of them are. But we first must take your post where you explained in depth the routing process of why your posts can "be routed through the local college"..oh yea, Dave..and then when shown you posted from two seperate access accounts in thirty days (AFTER you said you have ALWAYS accessed this group in the same manner) you offered "I have no idea how my server routes my posts. I am not familiar with the particulars".
I continue to be satisfied more than ever concerning what you offer.

 ONLY you and "Geo" have ever exhibited knowledge of the area.

>Wait, I thought it was back to the IP number?

>Make up your mind.

What you "think" has been demonstrated to be incorrect via your insistence at your right to retain ignorance when faced with truth and facts. Latest example: You saying roger beeps are illegal, you saying roger beeps are considered "entertainment devices" by the FCC, you saying many of the casual radio users here are felons for talking dx...hel, Dave,,your ignorance has no bounds.

The probabilty factor is always a hurdle for you,
>The probability is very high that you will take >unconnected incidences and attempt to make >a connection through convoluted logic.

You are only achieving to make yourself dizzy. Your offerings are not taken by the masses in the manner you believe.

Davie, exhibited with certainty when you offered the pathetic near-zero probability that N8WWM was framed by someone prior to the FCC announcing he was busted for jamming the Toledo Amateur Radio Club members on multiple occasions.

>I merely offered a possible alternative.

Again,,that you hold such a remote possibility a "possible alternative" reinforces the magnitude of your ignorance regarding the FCC's actions prior to making such a public statement as on the rain report. Here it is again, as you knew it was coming..it never ceases to amaze me, how some of those who are licensed in communications, such as yourself, can be so void of the information and laws regarding their chosen hobby. This is especially ironic when taken into context. your past stammerings claiming you are due respect by virtue your licensure.

>When one does not know all the facts, it's >irresponsible to jump to conclusions.

Especially when that person forgets (read:denies) what they say, and has to be led around by the noose to be shown.

>It's called reasonable doubt.

In a court of law, yes, not in a civil matter regarding the FCC.

>This was before the rest of the ugly picture >was drawn about Doug's "troubled" past.

"Drawn"? You mean by himself? Agreed,,,but you appear to be blaming others for bringing this public information to attention. This is very hypocritical of you. You have always maintained in the past, regarding your incorrect (arrived via your ignorance of FCC law) calling of others

"felons" that they should of thought of what they would be called before they committed the act. You also invoked the yellow cowardly "if the shoe fits wear it" principle, which you use as justification for your incorrect ignorance on calling dxers "felons".
Yet, for some reason you have a separate standard for others when they speak of Dogie's actions.
You claim the FCC may be incorrect in identifying Dogie as guilty on the Rain Report, yet you call others felons based on nothing more than your ignorance of FCC law. Very satisfactory, indeed.

> He has issues to be sure. But then so do you.

Wannabe-physician, heal thyself. Of course, with a teacher in the family, you should know where to begin.

>Only we have no way of finding out what they >might be,

Who constitutes "we"?
Only you continue to eat yourself up over my off-topic personal life. The others who I have had major disagreements with have managed to arrive, with myself, on a plateau that permits us to disagree without being disagreeable. this was not lost upon yoursefl, as you twice (via your sock) attempted to call yourself in the third person A) Once, Leland,,and B) Once, Frank.
You have enough to keep you spinning for the rest of the year.

> and you are hell-bent to make sure it >stays that way. It makes one wonder what it is >you're hiding.

No, it doesn't, as only socialists and those seeking to take away American birthright's subscribe to your oppressive "If one has nothing to hide, they have nothing to fear". This is America and you can't undermind that in any manner. The majority do not subscribe to such bullshit. It has been proven throughout history the more one knows about an entity, the more control they can exercise over such. There are scores of reading on this subject, in case you are not aware the originations of subscribing to such radical and oppressive beliefs. Couple this with your never-ending search and pleas and begs for personal information, your status-starved azz rears its nasty head again.

>Hell, even you have made comments about

>this general area. Maybe YOU are the one >posting as "George"?

Spin and slither, spin and slither, make for a very nervous dither.

As I said, you are really unnerved at this point, Davie. Lucidity is escaping you in increased increments.

>Insulting me does not deny the probability of >what I stated.

Pointing out your ignorance regarding radio law and your hypocrisy is not insultive < davie. That's your problem, you take everything personal and make everything personal......unworthy of proper communication or debate.

>That would be the same sort of reckless >accusation as if I were to "surmise" that since

>you live in Florida, you must be the same guy

>who used to go by the handle of "King Kong"

Only I would spend no time at all arguing with what you wish to believe.

>I don't "believe" anything, I was merely offering >a flip side comparison, of just how reckless Dither dither dither.

>Here's another possibility for you to consider.

>anyone else who you know, but rather another >anonymous twit who's been having a huge

>laugh at everyone's expense as they accuse >other people of being responsible for the >deeds.

And the only way you know this for absolutely sure and without any doubt whatsoever, is you are either that person, or heavily involved with the harassment. I surmise both.

>I didn't conclude it, I surmised it. ;-)

Actually, you didn't surmise it, you made a concise conclusion with a personal conviction of confirmation. Read again what you wrote.
When you include the word "Possibility" it removes any idea of a conclusion. There is a BIG difference between claiming that some IS a certain way and postulating that it is possible for something to be a certain way.

>And you are correct. The only way that I

>WOULD know for sure is to have some direct >involvement.

You're a dollar late and a day short. Your confirmation means nothing. Such was common knowledge with or without your stated admission.

> But I'm not saying that this IS the case, only >that it is a distinct possibility.

Here is where the beauty lies,,,,you don't have to say anything regarding it, Davie,,you won't change anyone's mind.
In fact, its not only a very distinct possibility, given the threat you made, your unyielding attempts at uncovering personal information on cbers who post on usenet, coupled with the probability factors that keep coming in to play, leave little doubt your involvement. In fact, such a direct threat is a picture perfect of your involved harassment actions.

>One thing that I DO know for sure is that I've >never posted here in the last 9 years under

>any other alias but my own given name. I have >no need to hide behind fictitious names.

Dither dither dither,,you also said you only accesssed this group in ONE manner and was proved a liar, to which you offered "Well, I have no idea why my server does that". this took place not long after you agev a detailed explanation of exactly how servers propagate messages, Dither. It was shown you were posting under the same account as that VE was at Villanova, When this was illustrated and brought to the group's attention, your reply was something along the lines.."Yea, well I borrowed an account at that time." You ahve made several claims that are off the wall, Davie..the threats, Keith framing Dogie, Dogie is really innocent,,,,,,,you are delusional, and so is the "Geo" poster.

>I never accused Keith.

Sure,,in the same manner you had to ask "who's Kim"..Do you really want to go there? Department of Licensure who regulates professionals is public information (DPR).
I mean, I let it slide once, but if you ahev the need to get personal again, and if you have such confidence in your statements regarding my "research ability", let's see who is correct.

>Do you need to go through the trouble to find it >out again? I also borrowed an account on the >Villanova mainframe system over 9 years ago.

>It's old news. Since then I have ALWAYS used >my real name on EVERY post that I've made. I >challenge you to prove otherwise.

Already have Davie,,but if you need those two posts presented side-byside where you claim in one you have no clue how your message propagates, then in another explain the detailed nuances of how your ISP propagates messages, I can accommodate. Of course, this was shown AFTER you claimed you have only one manner of access, but were shown to have two inside of thirty days.

>That's a hoot, as I am far more in line with

>what most moral, and respectful people see

>than you are evidently aware of.

Moral folks don't make idle threats based on their inability to discuss things rationally....you do. Respectful people don't pull a name from their azz and say the FCC Rain report may be wrong because someone "MAY" have tried to frame Dogie and the ''possibility does exist"...you do. Again, you are reaching for something so remote, that NONE , hammie or cber have subscribed to your theory, so feel free to repeat you are "in line" with the majority over and over. It simply fuels your delusion.

>And just how do you know that none have >"subscribed" to any of my "theories". Do you >regularly poll everyone in the world as to what >they are thinking.

On this subject, I do. But just for your sympathy "Who believes the FCC was wrong and N8WWM is actually innocent?"

>Are you so presumptuous >and arrogant as to feel that they owe you an >explanation?

This is your corner of the market,,,as your posts are chock full of you stomping your feet and holding your breath demanding freeebanders and dxers and amp users to give you an explanation of why they do what they do.

>No, that's the straight up truth. You are >nothing more than a curiosity to me.

Curiosities doesn't lead to threats like you make. It's much more than that for you, davie, adn if it's not, you ought to have yourself examined for allowing a "curiosity" to overcome your better sense and lead to such behavior that it leads to you making threats. You went out of your way and became so enthralled in your frustration over this,

you posted a direct threat that you would "spread my personal info around".

>When did I make this supposed "threat"?

>Please post the link.

Only after you deny it a few more times.

>When did I do that? Certainly not recently.

Sure you did, Davie, within the last couple of weeks.

>Prove it.

Come out and deny it again, first.

>You have no intention of revealing yourself,

As do the majority of internet users. Once again, that you shoe to ignore all ISP's and security experts advice does not give you any right whatsoever to demand others muck up as you did on the internet.

>as

>your anonymity is far more important to you

>than coming to some face to face reconciling.

Excuse you, but anonymity on the net has nothing to dow with face-to-face meetings. You were shown as much with my several offers of accomodating your request for a face-to-face, but you want something for nothing, wishing to meet at my place of business. Tell ya' what..I'll accomodate that, Dave. I'll meet you at a prearranged pier near my davit on any day and time you want, except weekends. Should I look for the the person with short-man syndrome?

I'm not anonymous to several on here.
You were just told that in another thread, but you may continue professing whatever it is that makes you feel better about yourself.

>No one here knows who you are.

Say it again, Davie,,,it serves up that loop you just can't manage to get in.

LOL,,,,most aren't unworthy lids with low-self-esteem like you and aren't interested in the "spreading of personal information" the way you threatened and just now inferred.

>and you are far too paranoid to risk that >happening.

Paranoia won't take your credit card as a deposit for your trip. Tell ya' what...I'll sweeten the pot,,,,if our full day trip doesn't yield at LEAST 150 pounds of fish, you don't pay. Now, put your money where your mouth is.

>You might have spoken to a few

Except those who have been to my house, went fishing with me, and done business with me over the net.
It's casual, Davie. I'll take your declination of accepting a day's trip as you have no actual desire to meet up for any pertinent reason but to make good on your threat. The booking of your trip with a cc protects ME, as well as you, which is the main reason you will not provide it.

What a case of classic self-projection,,,,merely because you would stoop majority of regs here are not like you at all. Only a few scumbags are interested in harassment as you threatened.

The mere posting of Dogie's ugly mug constitutes public humiliation of him? Hehhe,..that's the first time I ever saw you insult Dogie.

Mopar is gettting all the free legal advice he can handle regarding such media-like endeavors,

>In this case, you get what you pay for.

Exactly. And my media advice comes from a very expensive retainment team that is at my disposal.

Your protection of felons who harass this group on a regular basis, who have been busted by the feds, who have been found to be mentally unstable by a court of law you always invoke (all laws are to be obeyed, etc.) who have made countess posts containing homosexual preferences, connotations, and verbiage as insults, is much more offensive to the majority
than the posting of public information of said felonious harassers that you ignorantly misinterpret as harassment.

Please tell Geo this. He is choking on semantics concerning your term "convictions". But to force the truth from you, you took issue with the entire concept of Dogie being busted when I posted the Rain Report, which, I remind you, WAS public. THAT is when his lawbreaking hypocritical behaviors began to come to light.

> That being said, it does not excuse those who >seek to harness him.

Again, no one has sought to place a saddle or bridle on your pal Dogie you keep referring to as some type horse or other animal. No one has ever attacked people for presenting their legal status, either, but that hasn't stopped you from claiming it takes place all the time as an excuse for your hatred on this group, but when asked WHO you claim it is attacks others for their pro-legal stance, you get that stupid cuaght-in-the-headlights mentality and obfuscate in any manner you can, but never, ever provide for your claim :)

That cloak of anonymity is accepted by the majority of the users on the internet as basic common sense and security measures, doing exactly what all ISPs and security expers recommend. Harassment is against the law. N3CVJ is here presenting Dogie as a victim, and in this post claims that Dogie amintains he was harassed. When one is a victim, they contact the law, but of course, Dogie is a felon and the last thing a felon wants are LEOs at his home. Add to the fact that once Dogie's criminal status is taken into consideration when the LEO's investigate, they see no crime or evidence of a crime, and no witnesses to any crime, nothing except a felon's word, and Dogie may be in some deep sheeat for making a false police report. Fwiw, for Geo and Davie and Dogie, Steve broke no law.

Well, according to public documents provided by the courts of Ohio, Adair has mental problems and was court ordered to undergo evaluation. The court ordered mental health counseling for him. Adair has called himself many things, most recently a psychiatrist. ouple this that N3CVJ, N8WWM's largest supporter, made a post the other day claiming HE is qualified in the psychiatric field. Now, both of these ingrates fancy and present themselves skilled in the much debated and controversial field of psychology.
  Considering how close these two are (yea yea, I know, N3CVJ says he tries to distant himself from N8WWM, but members of this group have enjoyed watching his numerous posts defending N8 come to light. One great thing about google, ya' can't take it back), and the fact that the one who refers himself a "psychiatrist" was court ordered to undergo psychiatric evaluation, and that N3CVJ has the need to further himself in the eyes of others and boosting his lagging self-esteem by redundantly posting that he is somehow ALSO qualified in the field of psychology to make diagnosis' reserved for physicians, and two peas in a pod begin to emerge. What can Dogie possibly use for "deadly physcical force" for someone taking pictures fom a public place? Dogie, as a felon, isn't permitted any firearms and if he pulled a knife or club on Mopar, I am more than confident it would end up in his backside. In any event, once one INVITES another to their home for what Dogie termed a critical beating, he gave up his rights as an innocent and to use any deadly force, let alone a weapon. As usual, you're welcome.

No wonder you couldn't make it as a tech. There are many reasons to "peak" radios. In fact, what you term "peak" encompasses virtually any mods or work to a radio, such as removing the cover and aligning or tuning.

> All that is usually involved is peaking the Ahhh,,,well, there you have it, mistakenly believing that all techs "usually" look at peaking a radio in the same incompetent manner as yourself.

You would be best served putting your voodoo radio bullshit to rest. Assuming a peak and tune job is somehow related to increased "S" units is imbecilic.

If one was getting a 16 watt dead key from a cb, it would be just that,,a 16 watt cb and no longer a 4 watt cb.

A tune isn't necessarily illegal, yet you have maintained "peak" and "tune" are synonyms by your past posts regarding the opening of radios.

Twist:

Actually, there is a correlation. If two radios are set up in a "fixed" location, each, and one transmits a carrier, there will be a reading on the "s" meter of the receiving radio. Assuming the two radios are far enough apart so that the transmitted signal does not register above, say, s5 on the receiver, it is possible to get a relative power reading from the transmitting radio. Now if the transmitting radio increases power fourfold, say from 4 watts to 16 watts, the receiving radio should now show s6 on its meter.

This of course assumes that the receiving radio's ALC is tuned properly and that the s-meter is calibrated properly. In a properly calibrated receiver, a 3db increase in received signal strength should show about 1/2 of an S unit. Doubling the power output is the equivalent a 3db increase.

It's a moot point, but output power does indeed have something to do with "s" units, to the receiving radio. There isn't a direct correlation, and most CB receivers probably aren't calibrated properly, but there is a correlation, nonetheless.

To the original poster: as for the antenna advice, a Wilson 1000 is a decent antenna, and will do fine. You will notice increased receive and transmit range while still remaining legal.

Hope this helps.

Yes, thanks for the reminder. I am aware output has much to do with the S units on the receiving end.
What was being discussed was a peak and tune of a four watt radio. No amount of tuning or peaking is going to render a difference in S units from 4 watts.

True, and 3 db is just barely noticable at the receive end

Makes peaking a radio to get 1 more watt out of it more detrimental than beneficial.

Hey steveo, twistedhed said it is OK if you go to Dougs home, harass him, break in and assault him and nothing at all will happen to you because Doug has no rights. So go ahead rotflmfao get on with it you

How far are you transmitting? On a clear channel, or busy one?

4 watts is actually a great deal of power. The first mistake a newcomer makes is believing power determines range.

The Wilson antenna will increase both your transmit and receive range.

Is your radio tuned to your antenna? Again a newcomer mistake... not adjusting the SWR of your system. Just dropping a radio and antenna into a vehicle and operating is not all that is required. You must make sure the antenna/radio/vehicle combination are matched up with one another.
You can search on the web for how to adjust SWR.

Also, antenna location is important. Placing the antenna right in the middle of the roof of your vehicle is the optimum place to mount an antenna. Especially if it is a car.

To make it simple.... the metal in your vehicle will act as a "guide" for radio waves. Wherever the most metal is is the direction the radio waves will be directed. The center of the vehivle will direct your signal equlally in all directions. Placing an antenna, say on the roof of a pickup truck will actully direct the signal BEHIND the vehicle, since you have the whole bed of the vehicle to guide the signal. Mounting your antenna, say on the driver's side mirror of a car will actually direct the signal to the left, side and rear of the vehicle, while sending a diminished signal to the front and left. Hope that makes sense.

To be honest.... any and all radios will perform for the most party, the same. They differ in "bells and whistles" only. I had one of the first generation Cobry 19 Plus radios.... best sounding radio I ever had... perhaps the newer generations are similar.

If you want to stay legal, stay away from this stuff. The only legal way to operate a radio is out of the box. I have yet to see a peak and tune that doesn't sound awful, or bleed over.

To be honest, most radios ARE undertuned. You CAN get set up to run at the full legal 4 watts, and not exceed modulation limits. Just go to a trustworthy shop.

The one I got was http://www.radioshack.com/product.asp?catalog%5Fname=CTLG&product%5Fid=21-534 I took it back because nothing seemed to make much difference, or I wasn't operating it right, seemed to always fall in the red. The antenna I have the only way to adjust is to move antenna up and down. Maybe I wasn't in a good location. I finally got it to 2.3, and just left it. My question is was I operating it right to finally get a 2.3 or is that just a cheap ass SWR Meter?

In the red is VERY BAD.... A factor in your range for sure. 2.3 is not too bad... you want an SWR under 3. See my above on antenna location. I figure you have your antanna tuned as good as it can be. Your SWR meter was working properly. All it does is tells you the truth. Some vehicle/antanna combinations don't agree with one another.

This shouldn't surprise anyone.

The manufacturer has to certify that none of the radios built will exceed legal limits, so they are all designed to fall safely inside. If you think that anyone sits and adjusts each radio for max output, for a $40 retail product, you're dreaming, even if it's made in Pakistan.
On the high end, you MIGHT get this, but I rather doubt it.

Once you adjust anything internally, you've violated the certification.
These days, I'm not sure where the regs fall, but if you can have a radio repaired legally, then it would seem reasonable that the same shop could adjust it to as close as possible to the legal limits, legally..

But as others have said, you'll never notice the difference.
It really takes major improvements to make minor differences.
The antenna and feedline is the cheap and (sort of) easy place to make these differences, and it's completely legal.

I just don't know how to thank you. You answered my questions perfectly. Maybe for now I'll just keep the Cobra and get that antenna Friday and see the differences. I'll go back and purchase a SWR meter as well. My uncle that i rarely talk to is really big into ham radios see if I can borrow it.

487. A Mod tip I received in email (Newbie)

Newsgroup: rec.radio.cb

I was emailing folks before I found this board about some modifications and here is what i have gotten back so far. Keep in mind that I adjusted the VR2 back to the way it was, but now that I have received another email I'm wondering If I should try again. Exactly what is this guy helping me do, and what effects will I see If I do try again.

The email I sent out to him was::

I found your email in the forums, and have a few questions. I just purchased a Cobra 19 DX III and was wondering if you know of any specific Mods that I could do to make it get out there a little more.

His reply:

All you have to do on the dxiii is turn up the modulation pot. Open speaker side cover and look for VR 2, this will be a chrome/silver looking adjustable labeled on the board. Adjust it all the way left, key your mike and say "auuudio" while looking at your LED bars on the radio. If the LED bars don't increase as you say audio, turn the vr all the way right. That's it.

I emailed him back with this;

The ones that were chrome plated were labeled like L10, L11 etc......I'm listening through a friends handheld. Should I be hearing any excruciating feedback, because I'm not? I'm so tempted to turn some of these other things just to see what they do, but I am sure that would be a No-No because I dont want my radio screwed up. It just hard for me to tell which way is good (right or left) since my bars already hit the red when I speak.

He replied with this:

I can't remember which one it was, but adjust one of the other VRs about 1/4 left or right to see which one adjusts the meter WHILE KEYED UP. When you find it, adjust so while your keyed the meter reads about half. THEN go back to vr2 and you should see the diff adjusting the modulation.

Would a good place to test SWR be on the interstate, like off in the emergency lane. Last time I tested I was in my front yard. There is power lines around my house, would that make a difference? I'm assuming I need to find a clear place, which the best bet for me would be the interstate.

I doesn't really matter...
Although testing in the clear is probably better.

Alex;
Your front yard should be great place to tune your antenna, As long as your not parked right next to large mass of metal.

I would suggest you NOT adjust anything. You obviously do not have the knowledge or equipment to do this type of work. If you must have it peaked, take it to a pro. Better to pay for a tune-up than to pay for a repair bill.

That's really not a good place to do anything, except get killed.
A local Meijers or Wal-Mart parking lot would work nicely, anywhere that you can get clear of metal for 1-2 wavelengths. But I doubt you'll see any significant difference between that, and most home/on-street parking situations.

GREAT!! I bought another with the chip switch already installed....by rogerbird of course:-) I need to release some of my inventory now....somehow I've ended up with 3 2510's and a 2600!! Wife thinks I'm starting a shop or something!!

Someday maybe conditions will permit a QSO down there. I've been hitting the west coast pretty much every night and some in the mid west too on the way home from work.

Well, how she workin'??? My biggest problem is programming the friggin' thing...it's got so many options!!!

What do you care? Its a nice place, no druggies, little noise, close to work, reasonable rent compaired to some of the other places I've looked at etc.

I've been out of CB'ing for some years, but would like to get back on the air. I live on a fixed disabilty income, but I would like to find a 40channel Sideband cb radio (last one I had was the Sear AM/SSB one that was base/mobil) that I could get on nov.1st. Also any old PDL beams laying around unused?

Now try and figure out who wrote it. Judging by the number of times people have attributed posts to me that I didn't write your chances aren't good in my opinion. I don't post except under my own name. That way it stays nice and simple. Since I post using Comcast's high speed cable service, they use a semi static IP, its not hard to check addresses unlike somebody using a dial-up account where they get a different IP everytime they log in. And no
I don't know who it is either, but its fun watching others wasting their time trying.

It works great. I still have to get around to wide-banding it a little bit but other than that, great. I'll work on that this weekend.
The programming is easy. I just went down each feature and set it to what I wanted and forget it.

I am also an old sidebander. Even thought I dabbled with CB back in the mid to late 60s, I got hooked in 70s like so many others. ALmost immediately I went into SSB.

A city boy, Kenny, moved to the country and bought a donkey from an old farmer for $100.00.

The farmer agreed to deliver the donkey the next day.

The next day the farmer drove up and said, "Sorry son, but I have some bad news, the donkey died last night."

Kenny replied: "Well then, just give me my money back."

The farmer said: "Can't do that. I went and spent it already."

Kenny said: "OK then, just unload the donkey."

The farmer asked: "What ya gonna do with him?"

Kenny: "I'm going to raffle him off."

Farmer: "You can't raffle off a dead donkey!"

Kenny: "Sure I can. Watch me. I just won't tell anybody he's dead."

A month later the farmer met up with Kenny and asked,

"What happened with that dead donkey?"

Kenny: "I raffled him off. I sold 500 tickets at two dollars apiece and made a profit of $898.00."

Farmer: "Didn't anyone complain?"

Kenny: "Just the guy who won. So I gave him back his two dollars."

Kenny grew up and eventually became the chairman of Enron.

I started out on AM over in Hawaii, with my handle I used to get replys from Japanese Fishing boat. When I moved back to Calif. I picked up a Sear mobil AM/SSB and stayed mostly on SSB from then on. Then in the mid 80's I took my base to a shop to have a slider put in and when I got it back, the shop had totaly screw it up and they closed up not long after. So been out since then.

Naw, it's just dome-building. It might spit & sputter in the process, but don't expect anything big.

>I remember the last time, threw ash

>look like night time.

Depends on where you were. The cloud hit Yakima about noon, and we went dark about 3:30pm. It got lighter about half-an-hour later as the ash started to fall because the ash diffused the city lights just like snow.

And just for those that might see some ash come their way, don't panic. There were very few people that had problems breathing, and it's easily filtered with nothing more than a hanky (btw, those paper dust masks were about worthless). It caused more problems when it got into your hair -- sticks worse than hairspray.

The worst part was when people drove too fast and kicked up a cloud.
The other major problem was figuring out how to get rid of it. It doesn't soak into the ground and it doesn't blow away. We eventually shoveled it into trash cans and the city picked it up.

Here's a few tips if you get ash:

* Drive slow. This is not just for the sake of your neighbors, but keeps the ash from swirling into your bearings and crankcase.
* Put a sock over your car's air filter and change both often.
* Avoid using the windshield wipers as much as possible.
* Expect power outages if it rains before the wind blows the transformers clean.
* Don't hose it off your driveway or street -- the stuff hardens like clay when it dries and clogs the sewers and storm drains. What doesn't get wet is kicked back up into the air. And when the clay dries out it will break up and turn back into loose ash.

It didn't affect me down south, but I remember the news reports, nasty crap! If memory serves me correct, didn't the ash rise up into the atmosphere and affect places half way across the globe? (Asia, Europe, places like that)

The radio was modified with a six meter transverter kit, installed internally. The kit was removed prior to the auction and sold locally to a friend. I also used the radio to listen to shortwave broadcasts.

The most important part of any radio system is NOT the radio -- it's the antenna. It's the antenna that converts signals to and from the ether. If your antenna sucks, so will your communication REGARDLESS of what kind of radio you have. That being said.....

The best mobile CB antenna you can buy is the 102" whip (it's also one of the cheapest antennas). Shorter antennas are a compromise between length vs. performance. The longer the better.

And if you want your antenna to do the job it's capable of doing you have to mount it properly. Generally, the higher you mount it on your vehicle the better, but it's much more important that your mount is well grounded. Mag-mounts are mediocre at best. No-Ground-Plane (NGP) antennas are worse, and thru-glass antennas are junk.

There are two things you can do to make even a cheap radio talk much better: Get an external speaker and a better microphone.

Like Dave said, avoid the peak jobs. Especially one's where they claim to get 30 watts out of your radio and not void the warranty -- any warranty is voided when your radio is modified to exceed the legal limit of 4 watts (which translates to 16 watts peak/PEP). Most of the shops that offer peak-&-tune jobs are chop-shops that will tell you anything you want to hear just to get your money. And yes, some of their claims are flat-out lies, including the text you quoted in your post. (The work is illegal, so it shouldn't come as a shock to find out that their advertising is also illegal.)

The best thing you can do to improve your talk-power is to use a quality mic. You can improve it even more with an audio compressor, and don't exceed about 30% compression.

The meter probably works ok, and your location shouldn't make much difference (unless you are parked inside a steel shed). It's more likely that you have something wrong with your antenna and/or coax.
The antenna could be poorly mounted, the coax could be old (don't use foam coax!), the connectors could be bad, etc, etc. My first guess is that mag-mount antenna you are using is junk.

>I really hope someone has the time to answer and help out a newbie as >like that.

Amps are not only illegal, they are expensive. The laws of physics dictates that you need 4 times the power to double your range. That means you need an amp capable of 16 watts AM. The problem here is that most amps are rated for peak watts (PEP), which means you need 4 times

-again- as much power; i.e, a 64 watt amp. THAT's how much it takes to double your range, but -only- during transmit, NOT receive (and that's assuming you have an IDEAL antenna operating under IDEAL conditions). Ok, so you get a 64 watt amp, and after a while you want even -more- range. To double your range again you would need an amp capable of 256 watts. Double it again and you need over 1 Kilowatt! By the time you reach that point you are in it for the big bucks -- to run that kind of power you need two or three heavy-duty alternators (with all the pulleys and other hardware), battery cables thicker than your thumb, high-quality coax, an antenna capable of that much power, ...$$$$$ And here's the ass-kicker: if your range was 1 mile without the amp, you have only increased your range to 8 miles!

On the other hand, a better antenna can do the same job or better for -both- transmit and receive. It's also much cheaper. And it's legal.

>I seem to like the site I am planning on purchasing from unless >someone out here tells me there is no need for another radio because

To get everything running right you need to install everything properly. They can't do that through the mail.

Go to the library, find a book on CB or ham radio and read it. That's the best way to learn how to do things right the first time, and not pad the pockets of sham artists with your hard-earned money.

I don't think it had any significant effect beyond a few hundred temperature drop after volcanic eruptions, and Mt. St. Helens was on the chart near the bottom.

Before leaving, I'll add one more piece of evidence to the above. As you compare his (Voobner's) posts to mine, you'll notice many occasions that would have required me to stay up for nearly 24 hours to post the various messages. I saw numerous occasions where I posted messages in the early morning (1-5 AM), he posted messages in the mid morning (9-11 AM) and mid afternoon (1-6 PM), and I posted messages again in the late evening (10 PM - 12 AM), all in the exact same day. He clearly tended to post in the daytime, while I tend to post in the very late night hours. There are very few things that would keep me up for entire 24 hour periods, and posting to newsgroups darn sure isn't one of them. I'm not Aaron Voobner.

We should probably work on the date and location pretty soon so that Probably so, I purchased it for 20 bucks at a pilot truckstop. the guy said it was a good antenna. It's 36" base loaded coil antenna I'm not having much trouble at all receiving. I receive all kinds of stuff, but not always able to talk back to the people I hear. Its the transmitting, maybe I am just want more than any cb antenna can offer.

How far (guesstimate) if everything was just right would this 102" be able to transmit. Please don't tell me the Wilson 1000 isn't good.
I've heard to many good things about it from about 30 different people, owners of the antenna.

It's a good antenna, but it's also a compromise for the 102" whip since the whip is so much longer. I have both the Wilson 1000 and the 102" and the problem I have with the whip is the clearance under trees and such. It has the nickname "tree pruner", but it really can't be beat for performance.

They're both good antenna's.

There are a few good ones I can think of. Pesident Washington, Colt 480, 485, 1000 (black shadows), JC Penney 6247, 6241. All of these are easy to work on and add some extra channels. There is quite a lot of SSB between 27.405 and 27.805. I talked to California from Ohio yesterday. I've also talked to locals, as well as Italy, Germany, Bahamas, and a host of others. Most of the base skip has been with stock power.

I was emailing folks before I found this board about some modifications and here is what i have gotten back so far. Keep in mind that I adjusted the VR2 back to the way it was, but now that I have received another helping me do, and what effects will I see If I do try again.

VR2? You just made a post claiming you wanted to stay legal yesterday.
That was a quick jump.

I have no sock puppets. I have no need to hide. I'm who I am and have no need to deny it. Only people who are afraid to make themselves known need to hide behind sock puppets. Why would I need a sock puppet to say something that I am perfectly capable of saying using my real name? Once again logic escapes you.

I'll wait here for you to prove otherwise. Which, you can't.

Do they talk about where the family got its wealth from? Its not a widely known fact that the early Kenny clan members were into smuggling and that's how they got their money. That fact doesn't come out often like a dirty family secret. Then we have senator Kenny who killed a girl riding in his car many years ago when he drove off the bridge drunk in to the water and she drowned. I can't believe that anybody would have voted that guy in to any political office. He should be in jail.

You didn't say the brand of the antenna or where it is mounted. The antenna is the most important part of the whole system. You want an SWR of 1.5:1 or lower. One common mistake is to put something under a mag mount antenna to protect the paint. Don't do it. You'll never get a good SWR reading. Also, unless it is a shunt loaded antenna like the Wilsons, you want the loading coil above the roof. You'll be happy with the Wilson and if you can mount it, get the trunk mount. They are harder to steal and give a better ground. The radio you have should do just fine, once you get your antena problems worked out.

As for the peak and tune deal, there are many opinions and preferences. Firstly, the radio is designed around a 4 watt output. It is adjusted not only to meet the 4 watt legal limit but also to minimize harmonics. Just leave it alone and definitely don't have parts changed. The Mega-tune didn't sound too bad til I got to the parts changing part. I usually tweak the modulation up just a hair but never disable the limiter. Invest in a good power mic like an Astatic, Turner, or even a Cobra CA-75. This will improve your audio tremendously. If you want to talk farther, look for a radio with upper and lower sideband. I won't go into a big explanation but if you want to know about AM and SSB, do some internet searching. There's alot more to it than can be explained here. Also check out http://www.1stopelectronics.com . There is a forum there that you can read through and ask questions. There are some people who do some crazy things with radios but also alot of people with some good advice on good basic radios.

| I just purchased a Cobra 19 DX III and a 36" base loaded magnet mount
| antenna. So far I'm picking up pretty good, and transmitting well
| also. I don't think I'm getting out there as far as i can. Most likely
| this Friday I will be purchasing a Wilson 1000 Magnet Mount to replace
| the antenna I have now. Is that going to get me out there a little | more (the wilson 1000) No modifications have been made to this radio
| and have not been able to find any either. I purchased it brand new at
| a Pilot Truckstop, and am sure it is only putting out 4 watts (fcc | required). Will the Wilson make me receive further or transmit further
| or both, or neither? I'm new and feel it all has to do with how much
| your getting out (4 watts doesn't seem to good)
| Maybe I don't need a new radio, maybe the wilson 1000 will do what I | want it to do. I get so sick of losing communication once I'm not | close to truckers anymore. What do I need to do? I want to make sure i | am getting out as far as possible.

| My other dilemma:
| I've been looking here http://www.wilsonantennas.com/cobracb.shtml at
| some of the radios and the three that have caught my eye are:
| Cobra 29 LTD Night Watch Classic
| Cobra 25 LTD Classic
| Cobra 148 GTL Classic
| The site also offers two tuning options before shipping. Which one | should I go for? Seems like the Mega Tune. One more question below as | well. The tuning options are:
| The Mega Tune 29.99
| Our Mega Tune is designed to provide you with loud booming audio while | still maintaining a clean and clear signal. If you looking to sound
| raspy or bleed over many channels this defiantly isn't the | modification for you. Our techs have worked very hard to perfect this
| modification. The mega tune will not void any factory warranties, it
| will not damage your radio and it will not make your radio run warmer
| than normal. We also do not remove or disable any part of the AMC or | ALC circuit. We do upgrade various parts of the audio circuit with | higher wattage or better quality parts. We also do a few other
| modifications that make the radios wave form, when viewed on an | oscilloscope more linear. This means of course you will sound as loud
| as possible while still maintaining maximum clarity. If you are | looking for maximum performance from your radio we recommend you have | us perform this modification. We also completely warranty all work | performed by our service department. The mega tune will also increase
| your peak power. Dual final radios after being mega tuned typically
| put out over 40 watts and single final radios typically put out over | 30 watts.
| The True Tune 10.00
| Our True Tune is like a basic peak and tune. When you receive your | radio that have been True Tuned by Premiere Electronics you can rest | assured that your radio is operating at it's maximum efficiency. We go | through your radio and re-align the transmitter section. The reason
| this is necessary is because from the factory most radios just aren't
| working at their best. The factories don't have the time to sit down
| with every radio and precisely tune it. They generally get it in the | ball park, but if you are interested in performance, you need the true
| tune. Every modification we perform is backed up with our unbeatable
| warranty! Like always, none of our work will void any factory

| warranties.
| Last question: The one that bugs me.
|
| I purchased a SWR Meter from Radio shack. It was the cheapest one they | had and I am on a budget here, because some they had were way to | expensive. The one I got was
http://www.radioshack.com/product.asp?catalog%5Fname=CTLG&product%5Fid=21-534
| I took it back because nothing seemed to make much difference, or I | wasn't operating it right, seemed to always fall in the red. The | antenna I have the only way to adjust is to move antenna up and down.
| Maybe I wasn't in a good location. I finally got it to 2.3, and just
| left it. My question is was I operating it right to finally get a 2.3
| or is that just a cheap ass SWR Meter?
| I really hope someone has the time to answer and help out a newbie as
| I am very interested in Cb's since i finally broke down and got me
| one. I just want to be able to transmit and receive as far as possible | without breaking the law to bad. Not ready for a amplifier or anything | like that.
| I seem to like the site I am planning on purchasing from unless
| someone out here tells me there is no need for another radio because
| the Wilson 1000 will do what i want. I guess the reason i also like
| them is that they will tune and get everything running just right
| before they ship it. I know that wasn't done to the one I have now.

Are you THAT literal? Are you disputing my claim because you're hung up on the absolute definition of a "4 watt radio"? The term "4 watt radio" in this context, refers to a stock (legal) CB. If you peak the radio, of course it will no longer put out 4 watts, otherwise why do it? The truth is (a truth that you're either too anally specific about or unable to comprehend) that if you double your transmit power, you increase your signal by 3db. A typical "S" meter is "calibrated" in 6db increments. Therefore, assuming a linear (no not the amplifier) scale, an increase of 6 db (1 "S" unit) is the equivalent of taking a 4 watt carrier, and increasing it to 16 watts. Something that is not possible from a simple "peak job".

There's nothing "voodoo" about it. But don't take my word for it. Check out some books on radio propagation, and read it for yourself.

Well, assclown, all I can tellya is try it and see for yourself. You and mopeadope are both sidewalk sissies. As for your boyfriend mopeadope I suggest he bring a camcorder instead of a still cam next time, that way it will hurt more when stuffed in his moneymaker, I

I always just went somewhere that you can have about 20 feet of unobstructed space in all directions. Most parking lots fit that criteria. It's really not going to make a big difference unless you're backed up to a wall... or inside a garage... not recommended.

Hmmm... and considering that both Mr. Bush and Mr. Rumsfeld were on TV just today and admitted that they have absolutely no evidence that Saddam was involved with any terrorist groups didn't help his "Saddam and the Bin Laden crowd were as thick as thieves" scenario was a bunch of nonsense. Now who's the liar now?

i figure since most of the posters are east of the mississippi the location should be as such, august would be ideal preferably the first couple of weeks as its enough past the fourth and enough before labor day. something in a private campground or even a private yard with enough acreage not to be a bother to neighbors. kentucky maybe?

It's well documented for those who really want to go and look. And I'll bet years from now people will forget all about Clinton's scandals while in office like the FBI files used to investigate political rivals that suddenly "appeared" on a table top in the White House of all places. Nobody ever owed up to having them, but there they were plain as day.

so simple to do your own wiring, board is not necessary. few wires, lights can be glued in holes, couple of resistors, waala, that's it.(I don't have a schematic, yet)

hey poopfessor, how come the 10 meter amp you are selling on your web page has no provision for CW. That part of 10m is always very active, arent you afraid you will lose sales to 10m hams you are marketing it to?

.....oh brother. Since when did 10 meters cover 26-29MHz?

Your amp is rated 180 watts RMS and 350 watts PEP? Why is this issue so confusing, Brian? If the amp is rated for 350 watts PEP it's rating for AM will be 87.5 watts RMS dead-key. So where do you get your figure of 180 watts RMS?

Your confusion seems even worse when comparing AM, FM and "PEP". If the input can take 20 watts PEP it can take 20 watts FM. Even if your power dissipation can't handle a steady 20 watt carrier, it should at least be able to handle more than an unmodulated AM carrier or you couldn't use AM. Haven't you learned the basics YET?

And what's "compression"? If you overdrive an amp you get CLIPPING, not compression. It may be hard-clipping (typical of solid-state amps such as your's) or soft-clipping (more characteristic of tube amps), but it's still clipping and it still causes harmonic distortion.

On that note, let's look at those distortion figures: -33 dB with 100 watts CW..... aw, Brian, haven't you learned yet that you are supposed to do those tests under modulation? Otherwise they don't mean squat (and those are pretty crappy numbers for an unmodulated carrier!). If you modulate the carrier you can test it at your rated 350 watts. But I don't think you want to do that. In fact.....

Did you ever look closely at your input/output graph? Do you know what the word "linear" means? And didn't you notice how the graph starts curving more sharply at about 10 watts input? That's an indication that your amp is clipping; i.e, causing distortion. Now we know why you didn't measure distortion above 100 watts..... because it's a noisy critter!!!

Brian, your amp is a cheap hack, it sucks, and you are so ignorant that you even provided the proof. Your amps will always suck until you finally decide to sit down and educate yourself about RF electronics from the beginning; i.e, starting with the basics. Maybe then you can build a decent amp and capitalize on the -legal- amp market instead of trying to prey on hapless CBers that have been misinformed by voodoo-techs like yourself.

Geeze! Why don't you tell him what you REALLY think. ;-)

Actually the term "compression" refers to the condition where a normally linear device, starts to lose that linearity. If the gain of your amp is 10 db, then 5 watts in should give 50 watts out. 10 watts in should give 100 watts out. If 15 watts in only results in 120 watts out, you are now "in compression". You call that clipping, but compression is also a valid term for this condition. We use this term all the time where I work. Granted the amps I work with are not as powerful, they are still governed by the same characteristics. Usually once "compression" is reached the incidents of second order harmonic generation increases disproportionately with the output, usually at a 2:1 ratio.

But you are right about one thing. a -33dbc harmonic rating from a single carrier signal is pretty poor. Perhaps a chebychev lowpass filter on the output will fix it up.....

Hello Abraham:

I would lift or unsolder one of the ends and see the number.

Maybe M Tech is correct. But I know for a fact that the 4 and 8 pill Messenger amps that had the 2SC2789 in them where and are dogs. Low output, from a poor design.

Well 2789's have roughly twice the rms of 1446's. So if it is an 8 pill 800, I would think it's a 1446......but it's just an opinion:-). I could easily be wrong.

just posted and said the EXACT same thing about Geo the day before yesterday under your sock puppet.

>And that just burns you doesn't it?

Stop making everything personal. Nothing burns me in this group. I don't take it serious like you do. the word that escapes you, is "entertainment". Watching someone that is a repeat felon take others to task for dxing illustrates how far removed this person is form reality.
Your behavior, as illustrated, is identical and parallel in many ways to Dogie.

>It's hypocritical to point out the wrongs of

In the first manner, I never pointed out anyone's wrong doings until they began making noise about my dx activities and freebanding, which, as you correctly illustrate, is highly hypocritical for one to do when they are a convicted felon and only then did I "point out the wrongdoings" of those who were tossing stones my way while residing in section 8 glass houses.
Keeping it closer to home, you, unprovoked and on many occasion, have called me and others, a criminal and a felon many times for nothing more than our posting topics discussing dx activities.
Take into consideration your position just a few short years ago of using amps, illegal peaking and tweaking and converting of radios and claiming cbers are more fun and less uptight (than hammies) because they are "regular folk", and you are the shining epitome of hypocrisy.

This is the place where I tame your unbridled ignorance and arrogance concerning the United States and the laws regarding the conviction of a crime. Under the laws of this great country, one is only a criminal when found guilty in a court of law. I understand that you are status starved and would like nothing better than for your spouted ignorance to be true, but you mean nothing in the eyes of the court and people are not criminal merely because you refuse to educate yourself on what constitutes a felon. I note you have been forced to distance yourself from your claim that a dxer is a felon and you are now, albeit still incorrectly, attempting to call those who commit acts you disagree with (and that you have committed yourself on numerous occasion) a "criminal" as opposed to a felon. Dither dither dither.

You are not the judge or the law you and you have much trouble comprehending the simplest of things regarding your self-destructive and ignorant claims.
Everyone knows you are an angry, dejected hammie that claims society is reflected on the cb and that you sit around pining for the "lden days".
Everyone knows you mislabeled many good, decent ops as "criminals" and "felons" without so much as an admittance you were wrong or apology, but alas, everyone kows what you are about. For the future, so you don't embarrasss yourself further, calling one a felon or criminal when they haven't been convicted of a crime by a court of law is about as valid as one accusing you of being a convicted pedophile.

This isn't a court of law, I need prove nothing merely becuase you demand and fancy yourself a physician of psychiatry and doctor of jurisprudence with muffed definitions and posts and delusions of what constitutes communication law.
Not only have you failed with your attempted obfsucation by changing your incorrectly chosen and much over-abused term of "felon" with "criminal", you are now attempting (yet, still failing) to the same with your claim of "sock puppets".
A few months ago you claimed you never used more than one ACCESS to this group, except for the college, but it was shown you most certianly did, inside of thirty days. Now you modified your lie, er , claim, and eliminated the word "access" and replaced it with "name." In any event, as I said, this is not a court of law, and I am invoking probable cause,,,I am satisfied the contingency knows it is probable, based on your stated causes, you are much less than honest.

And still manage each and every day to illustrate you know less about proper communication(s) skills and radio law than most cbers in this forum. Hell, than most cbers I know.

 It ilustrates your blown self-esteem. I guess if I was as ignorant as your remarks about FCC law that hold roger beeps illegal and dxing as a felony, >Deny all you want.

You were the only one here denying roger beeps were legal and that dx wasn't a felonious act, Davie, not I, not anyone else,,,,,only you.

>DXing IS illegal,

Never was contested. What was contested and shot full of holes, was your ignorant claim that those who talked dx were by virtue, a felon.
You were taught the merits on what you were attempting to discuss (dx and laws pertaining to) was a civil matter, not criminal. You were further instructed to email Phil Kane and ask him, since you were loathe to believe me for personal reasons affecting your emotion that prevent objectivity on your behalf. You obviously pissed yourself off by placing yourself in position to being forced to be educated once again by a lowly cber. This is reflected upon your subtle cries of deflection "well, it USED to be illegal" concerning the roger beeps, which you still have yet to show or (yawn) provide for.

> and roger beeps were at one time >considered in the same vein as other >noisemakers as >devices to amuse or entertain.

An still doesn't excuse your ignorance..ignorance of the law is no excuse. You said they were illegal, not that they used to be illegal. Twice you were wrong, twice you can't even bring yourself to admit it, which is why I had to reiterate it and make you repeat yourself and clarify in your own underhanded manner, that you now comprehend dxing is not a felony and roger beeps are not illegal. You're welcome.

>I would hurry up and start tooting my own horn >about another area of which I have slightly >more knowledge than that of the law which >governs "your" element.

I guess you would, but then again you were so blatantly wrong twice in a row, no one blames you for not starting to "toot your own horn about another area" in which you claim knowledge.

>I understand the law well enough.

Making claims that cbers talking dx makes them felons is about as far as one can get from understanding the law, but you go on and continue to espouse your ignorance and continue to believe you were successful in passing it off as intelligence.

>At least I'm >not blatantly disregarding it.

You can't even understand, comprehend, or define the law, so there is no way at all you can claim you aren't disregarding it. Since you are blatantly ignorant of the law, you can not comprehend when you blatantly violate it.
More for your education today.....regardless of your repeated failed attempts to portray myself as such, I don't blatantly disrespect the dx law, Dither-Davie, I selectively disregard it. But since you are unable to differentiate between civil and criminal, what constitutes each, maintain you are a psychiatrist and doctor of jurisprudence, claim that dxing is a felony, and that one is a criminal without being convicted by a court of law, one could not expect you to comprehend something as simple as the difference between the two adverbs "blatantly" and "selectively"
Nevertheless, tuning a 4 watt radio will not affect any "S" unit on the receiving end. You go on and believe it will and continue to sling your voodoo bullshit that is found in your posts from your claim of making a Davemade "spectrally pure" (something which you are unable to define, but claim you did) to your bullshit about increased S units from a 4 watt radio.

>Are you THAT literal?

Not at all, you're THAT off-topic and reaching for anything but the topic which was being discussed in the thread to which I replied,,,,, .a 4 watt radio.

> Are you disputing my >claim because you're hung up on the absolute >definition of a "4 watt radio"?

That was what was being discussed. Go on and reach for something else, now,

>The term "4 watt

>radio" in this context, refers to a stock (legal)

>CB.

As was being discussed.

>If you peak the radio, of course it will no longer >put out 4 watts, otherwise why do it?

Lowering the deadkey to 3 watts.
I said a peak and tune on this radio will not result in a net change (increase of S units) and you began menstruating....again.
Peaking and tuning are not synonymous, yet you have voodoo'd them into a merger on many occasion.

>The truth is (a truth that you're either too >anally specific about or unable to >comprehend) that if you double your transmit >power, you increase your signal by 3db.

You are unable to follow the thread, as usual, Davie. The radio in question was a stock radio. I don't care how much peaking you do, you aren't going to raise an S unit on a 4 watt radio,and THAT was the claim
I made, regarding the radio being discussed.

>A typical "S" meter is "calibrated" in 6db >increments. Therefore, assuming a linear (no >not the amplifier) scale, an increase of 6 db (1

>"S" unit) is the equivalent of taking a 4 watt >carrier, and increasing it to 16 watts.

>Something that is not possible from a simple

>"peak job".

And you danced around it until just now. Let's see my comment that has you running all amok....."You would be best served putting your voodoo radio bullshit to rest. Assuming a peak and tune job is somehow related to increased "S" units is imbecilic." Appears you are the one all "anally specific" (to use your term). I guess I SHOULD have been specific when speaking to you, but I wasn't.
Here it is again, and this time, it's "anally-specific" and tailored to YOUR anal specifications. See if you can tell the difference, then tell me again how I was too specific the first time I posted it...

"You would be best seved putting your voodoo radio bullshit to rest.
Assuming a peak and tune job is somehow related to increased "S" units
ON THIS 4 WATT RADIO WE ARE SPEAKING OF is imbecilic."

You have yet to "hang me out to dry" with anything you've attempted to counter. Like the pitiful democratic presidential candidate, your only retort has been to distort the truth and then accuse your opponents of exactly what you do.

Like I said to you many moons ago, I enjoy tweaking the mentally enjoyment. If you believe that I am angry, you are so far off the mark, that you might as well be on the moon.

A lame excuse. Two wrongs do not make a right. And like in public school, it doesn't matter who started the fight, both parties are guilty of fighting and are punished accordingly.

> Keeping it closer to home, you, unprovoked and on many occasion, have

I believe the term I used was "criminal". "Felon" was the term you juxtaposed with "criminal" and I suppose I might be partially to blame for not correcting you, and I left it go.

You still don't get it do you? I have tried to say it before but you just can't grasp the subtle differences between my personal feelings on a subject, and the facts on what the activity is in the eyes of the law.

I, personally, have no problem with people who act responsibly and considerately toward other people, while they break the law and shoot a little skip or otherwise go beyond the law as stated in Part 95.

I sided with the "Legal" crowd because, as a matter of fact, the behavior which you defend so vehemently (yet peculiarly cannot acknowledge the illegality of) is in fact illegal.

I still maintain that the CB'ers I knew (and many of whom have been immortalized on my website) during the heyday of CB were orders of magnitude more fun than the sometimes humor challenged hams. That has never changed. But I've also stated that the quality of CB'ers has taken a sizeable plunge in the last 15 years. Back in the day, you could have fun without using obscenities. You didn't need hundreds of watts to talk 10 miles. You didn't have people picking fights with other people over the air. The few sociopaths were dealt with, and the problem was solved.

That is little more than an argument in semantics. It's nothing more than the flawed assertion that "it's not illegal 'till I'm caught". That is a flawed "I'm living in denial" defense. I'm sure there are murderers running around free on the street because they haven't been caught yet. But it doesn't excuse their behavior or change what it is.

I have always maintained that anyone who breaks the law is a "criminal" The dictionary would agree with me. I've provided the logical progression in the past on what constitutes the law, crime, and a criminal.

You added the term "felon" as synonymous with criminal.

>Everyone knows you are an angry, dejected hammie that claims society is >reflected on the cb and that you sit around pining for the "lden days".

No one but you thinks that. I told you before, you are little more than entertainment. It's fun watching you spin, obfuscate, deny, argue semantics, and get hung up on literal meanings. You should work for the democratic party, your tactics are just as disingenuous.

>Everyone knows you mislabeled many good, decent ops as "criminals" and >"felons" without so much as an admittance you were wrong or apology, but >alas, everyone kows what you are about.

Why should I apologize for something which is factually correct? If you engage in freebanding, you ARE breaking the law. There are no if's and's or but's about it. Sorry if you don't like the feel of the shoes you chose to wear. But pretending that the emperor has no clothes, doesn't change the facts.

Which operators are "good" or "bad" is a subjective matter of opinion.
I don't consider the mental midgets who "squash mud ducks" to be "good" operators. They have little consideration for their fellow citizens.

If you were a straight up real man, and would say something like "Yea,
I operate illegally, so what?", I'd have more respect for you. But you won't even acknowledge that what you do is illegal, and (vainly) deny that you do anything wrong..

> For the future, so you don't >embarrasss yourself further, calling one a felon or criminal when they

There's a big difference between someone who is guilty of an illegal activity who just hasn't been caught yet, and a groundless accusation.
I have never partaken in any activity which could be remotely considered pedophilia. You, on the other hand, break federal law on the daily basis.

You should have read a post I wrote a week ago.... The ground plane for a mobile antenna is the vehicle and the ground below the vehicle.
Regardless of what antenna you use, you already have a ground plane.
What you -need- is an "RF ground" for your antenna mount. The center conductor of the coax goes to the antenna, and the sheild goes to that RF ground. It can be the car body, chassis, bumper, roll-bar, or even a bracket bolted onto any of those parts. But it must be a GOOD connection -- a magnet does -not- make a good ground connection.

Good is relative. The Wilson will work to a given extent. You could do worse, but you could also do better. A cheap 5' fiberglass whip from RS will work just as well as a Wilson 1000, as well as some of the other brand-name, premium-priced antennas on the market. There is nothing magic about antennas, and just because it bears a popular brand name doesn't make it perform any better. On the contrary, I have built a few antennas from scratch and all of them work BETTER than their manufactured equivalents.

Like I said before, hit the library and read up on the basics. It will answer most of your questions both now and in the future.

I have used 3 methods to gain access to USENET. From 1995 to 1996, I "borrowed" an account on the Villanova VAX system. From 1996 to 2003,
I used the news server provided to me from Worldlynx networks. From 2004 on I have the news server provided with my new isp, ptd networks.
Those are the ONLY gateways that I have used to place messages on this forum. That is the plain and simple truth.

Once again your penchant for getting hung up on rigid literal terms is what prevents you from proper comprehension, and allows you to believe these paranoid fantasy lies. I never denied that I have several methods of gaining access to the INTERNET. But I have only used 3 different news servers in 10 years to gain access to USENET.

Are you familiar with DHCP? Maybe you should read a little on the subject.....

Let's try and clarify a few terms here.....

Clipping -- distortion that occurs on the top of a waveform due to the signal exceeding the limitations of the circuit.

Limiting -- the result of intentionally preventing a signal from exceeding a given level. This can be done by clipping, automatic gain control, or both.

Compression -- a term usually applied to audio conditioning where the amplification of a signal is varied inversely to it's input level. One of the most common types of audio compressor is called "constant volume amplifier".

But the problem here is that the term 'compression' has beed adopted by voodoo techs as a euphamism for 'clipping', making it sound as if the distortion-causing effect is not only benign, but sometimes preferred. It is neither.

>But you are right about one thing. a -33dbc harmonic rating from a >single carrier signal is pretty poor. Perhaps a chebychev lowpass >filter on the output will fix it up.....

That would be nothing more than a kludge. The fault is in the design.
The response isn't even close to linear. That may be due to the bias class, the bias regulator, the choice of active device, or just crappy engineering overall. I suspect it's a little of everything.

I'm not saying I am going to mess with the inside cause i am still a little afraid to do that, but if there are some pots to turn that are foolprrof then i will appreciate any input. I'm so excited cause I really didn't want the 19 dx III to start with. I didn't have the money, but I just couldn't wait. I hope I'm making a good choice. I asked around and several said it was a good choice. Any info you can give me would be great about this radio

I was watching that Sears Roadtalker, whew, it's gone past my limits real fast, I really didn't think there would be a demand for the sears ones, heck sears dropped them back in 78 even. Lat time I checked it was up into the $30 range.

Yet another radio getting the "golden screwdriver" treatment.
That's why there are so many CB rigs out there that sound like crap.

I just purchased this radio, and have not hooked it up yet. My wife is off in the car at the moment. I figured now would be a good time to ask a few questions.

Dynamike - Delta Tune and RF Gain- I read the manual, and understand it, but is there any better setting for each of these? What should I do and not do to these controls. Just wondering which controls are more sensitive to not hearing TX from others if their set to high, and vice versa....which ones set to high or low will cause my TX not to be heard, stuff like that. Hope someone can help.

Hello, Twist

Dave was referring to 'S' units at the other end of the circuit. One 'S' unit is supposidly equal to 6 dB. 6 dB is an increase in power of four times.

As to peak and tune, I've seen both CBers and hams make the same mistake if they had a meter that could be switched between rf output and plate current (admittedly, I am going back a couple of years here ... make that 3 decades LOL). In both cases, the poor guys simply had the switch in the wrong position and tried to "peak" the unit. They peaked the plate current. In the case of the CB, it was easy to retune and the rig performed just fine; in the case of the ham, the poor final looked like superman grabbed it with a red-hot hand and squeezed. It really looked like fingerprints and a thumb mark on the glass where it got so hot that the atmospheric pressure forced the very hot glass inwards :))

Jim - top posting so as not to get more confused than I already am LOL

Hello All:

Ok the SD1446 has a transistor case type 211-07, which shows the white Pill part of the transistor to have a diameter of .370 inches, or real close to 3/8 of an inch.

The 2SC2789 Transistors have a case type 211-11, which shows the white pill part having a .5 inch diameter.

So if the Messenger Amp has white pills approx .370 or 3/8 inch in diameter, I'd go for it. That would indicate that it would be using the good design of the SD1446 Transistors.

Big Ten-4

652. Palomar TX-200 schematic

Hello,
I received two older Palomar TX-200 amps in an estate sale. One works and one does not. The one that works keys about 150 watts on my dummy load with 4 watts drive, but the audio is distorted. The is the older version of the TX-200 amp that has one transistor driving four.
The four final output transistors are tx-100 transistors.
Does anyone have a schematic for the older version of this amp?
Looking at the age of the other CB radios that came with this package sale, I'd guess this amp was made in the mid to 1970s.

Thanks,

Night Ranger

OHhh man I was hoping you'd post those wonderful credentials, that more than likely gets you where you need be, by its' own self!

Wish I could make the dance at 44's place, but have one on me and I'll square up with ya later.

We're trying to get some input as to when and where for the rrcb bonanza, so suggestions are welcomed.

Here's the best advice I can give: If it works, don't fuck with it!
The 29 LTD is a very decent radio. Please keep it that way.

Some will suggest tweaking VR-this or VR-that, but avoid the temptation. You may notice an improvement, but it's usually at the expense of something you don't notice. For example, if you tweak up the modulation pot, you will certainly increase your audio. But the pot is set at the factory for 90 to 97% modulation, which is just dandy. Turn it up and you run the risk of overmodulation, an effect you can hear when someone bleeds over onto adjacent channels. It can also cause interference to your neighbor's boob-tube. The frequent modification of "snipping the limiter" has the same effect. Another reason to avoid tweaks: People like to turn the power pot to get an extra couple watts. Now I already pointed out that a couple extra watts isn't going to make any noticable difference. But if you -do-tweak the power you must also tweak the modulation to match the new carrier or your modulation drops and your audio gets quieter instead of louder. And after that you must compensate for the increased power consumption by the radio, assuming the heat-sinks for the power transistors are capable of the increased power. If not, you could fry your driver or final and your radio goes to the shop. Another tweak is to the voltage regulator, but that can change the voltage regulation of the PLL (frequency circuit) and send your radio transmitting anywhere but where you want. Etc, etc.

CB radio is a plug-n-play concept. If you want to start tweaking transmitters, look into getting a ham license. They are cheap, the test is unbelievably easy (you get to memorize the questions before the test!), and there are lots of hams that are more than willing to help you get started with the hobby.

Anyway, back to your new radio. First, get an external speaker. Not a horn speaker, but one you can use inside the vehicle. Even an old car stereo speaker will work. There are two speaker jacks on the rear of the radio: PA and EXT. Use the EXT jack. You will notice a =-BIG-= improvement in sound quality over the cheap little speakers that usually come inside stock radios.

Next, find a good place to mount it. Try to mount it on, or as close as possible to, the chassis or dash. Run the negative power lead to the closest point that contacts the chassis -- the closer the better, and cut the lead as short as possible. If you can mount it directly to the chassis (like the transmission hump or under the dash), run the negative lead to the mounting bracket. Or, as an alternative, run both power leads to your power source and run a third wire (again, as short as possible) from a screw on the back of the radio to the vehicle chassis/dash. Make sure all connections are good, clean and tight.

Let me know when you get ready to install the antenna and coax.

We could do that if people bring campers or motorhomes. In fact I do it two or three times a year over here.

That's a microphone gain control. If someone says you are too loud or your audio is crappy, turn it down.

>- Delta Tune

That's for tuning in people who have had mods done to their radios and can no longer tune the exact channel frequency. It also helps for people who still use old crystal rigs because crystal frequencies tend to drift over time.

Turn it up to bring in weak stations. Turn it down to cut down on Bummer. Hope you latch on someplace else,I know that's ruff on the budget.

Never say never, since we're talking about Aug 2005. You might be

Yep, it wouldn't make much sense for you to drive is we're south bound, unless we're hotel bound. I have room for you here and in my travel trailer. All'z you need to do is put in for vacation and watch the super duper airfare saver's.

I'll even let you talk on your old 2510 on the way down!

The first pic is just the top of the pile. The other two show the damage done by a moron who didn't know you have to lock the steering wheel when towing a vehicle backwards:

hehe..you are a pack-rat and so am I. Cool that you fired off the CB graveyard pics so quick! Not so good

i am management so vaca is no problem. the airfare may be a bitch as there are no direct flights from our little airport. worked 100+ countries with that radio.

Well then, all ahead full steam, captain. It would be a pleasure to have you ride shotgun down there with me. We really haven't decided where to host it yet tho. We need to find out how many people are interested in going first.

You should start a new thread and take a vote.

>Let me know when you get ready to install the antenna and coax.

I have an antenna now, magnet mount 36" base loaded. I've adjusted the SWR with a external meter. With this antenna the best i could get was 2 SWR. I'm sure most of my problems are from the antenna. It's a $20 antenna from the truckstop. and I have dont all I can do with it. It's mounted in the center, but some advised put it about 6-12inches from the windshield.

By problems I mean I'm not getting anything coming in clearly, all kinds of static. I had the Gain to max, so that might have been just a distant signal (like I said I'm still playing with the controls) I'm a newbie who feels that i should be able to hear everyone at all times. (right now I am just enjoying listening) When I set the gain lower I hear nothing (could be just noone around) It's not like I live in a town where alot of action goes on, so I think that is just my paranoia thinking that my radio is not working right.

I know how to operate squelch, but on my other radio cobra 19 dxIII thats all I had to worry about . Now, with the squelch all the way down I don't even get the hissing sound unless I turn up the gain a pretty good bit, and then thats when I get those weak signals coming in. When someone is transmitting on the meter bottom line is signal, it stays between 1-3, more towards 1.5- 2 lots of static, but as soon as someone comes in clear it jumps up 3 or further (I'm assuming they are closer) which I like so much. LOL

So my theory, as a newbie, My radio is fine, and I'm not gonna open the case. I'm just getting over anxious, and my antenna is not one of the best, and just hoping that with a better antenna those weak signals that i am hearing will come in much better with a better antenna. Because of everything I have read the one thing thats keep sticking out in my mind is that the cheapest of radios can be all that you need as long as you dont go cheap on the antenna.

I'm broke right now, and just hoping when I get the wilson 1000 magnet mount it will get better. I'd like to go for the little will, because it's not so dang long but not sure if it will get out as good as the 1000. The reason is the radio is on my van, and with the 62" wilson 1000 I want even be able to pull under my carpot without it scraping the ceiling. I wish I knew how to install one that wasn't a magnet mount, and maybe I could put it on the back side of the van, and drop it down a little, and I hate to have to pay someone to install a antenna. I'm just kind of bummed out right now.

That was a repost of my filter figures.
The posts of yours which made the filter would have been when you posted replies to filtered threads or used filtered words in the subject line.

In the end, this group got so bad that I started working it the other way around.
I no longer filter out the crap, I only download those that look like they could be interesting and, with any luck, on-topic.
I set OE to download headers only, and select which subjects to download the message bodies for. Of course, I still filter out the no-hopers before I get the original headers.

Regards,

Peter.

I have a extra speaker that hooks up to my little mini stereo that I never use. I figured I would try it out just to see. Remember now I am a newbie, and messing with all these wires and stuff makes me a bit nervous. On the back of the Cobra 29 LTD Classic is the place for it just like you said EXT, but it's a round hole. One the back of the speaker I have is two wires, one red, one black. There must be some type of a adapter I can purchase. I hate to buy a new external speaker if this speaker here will work. What do i need? Thanks so much for all the help you have given me.

An SWR of 2:1 isn't bad, but 36" just doesn't cut the mustard. Save

It sticks in your mind because it's mostly true. I say "mostly" because there are some radios out there with less-than-ideal performance (the TRC-435 comes to mind), but generally they all do pretty much the same job -- the only major differences are in the bells and whistles. And just remember that no matter what radio or antenna you are using, you will -always- have weak signals.

If you can drill a hole, you can install an antenna. And you may not even have to drill a hole......

I've seen two really good places to mount an antenna on a van. The first is a side- or rear-mounted ball near the roof. If you are short on funds you can probably find one of those for a couple bucks at your local pick-&-pull wrecking yard. And you can figure out how to install it by uninstalling it from another vehicle (slick, huh?).

Another option is a mirror-mount antenna. The advantage is that the mount clamps to the mirror bracket and you don't have to drill any holes. But these are a little tricky because your mirror bracket must be grounded to the door which must be grounded to the vehicle, and you must route the coax through the door in a way that doesn't pinch or repeatedly bend the coax.

Personally, I don't have any problems with drilling holes in my vehicles. But if you do, think about making a mounting bracket. It's just a piece of sheet metal that can be bolted under the hood or to the inside of a door frame, and the antenna mount bolts to the bracket. Works fine. Just don't forget to file down the corners and sharp edges (that's a blood-loss thing, not an RF thing).

Most important is that your mount should have a 3/8-24 stud. This is the standard mount and will allow you to use the widest variety of antennas, from a 9' whip to a 6" stubby (which will give you about as much range as your headlights). And you can change them as fast as you can unscrew one and screw on another. Longer antennas can be mounted with a spring which, as I think you can obviously see, is better than stopping to put the mag-mount antenna back on the roof every time it gets knocked off. You have an advantage with a van because you could keep a nice collection of antennas in there without a problem.

Another issue is coax. Despite what others may claim, the standard RG-58 is fine. But DON'T use foam coax -- it's not for outdoor use and can cause problems in a very short time. You can buy the coax new, but you can get it much cheaper if you know where to look -- computer shops and recycling yards. A lot of LANs used high-quality RG-58, and now that people are going wireless there is lots of this used coax available, much of it in excellent condition because it was installed indoors. Many LANs use RG-59, but don't use that. It has different characteristics and will not work as well as RG-58.

And don't use crimp-on or twist-on connectors. This is one thing you might want to pay someone to do. Or, get a soldering gun and a few old connectors and practice it yourself (which is the way the rest of us learned). Then people will pay -you- to make -their- cables.

When you run the coax, don't crimp it against anything or make sharp bends. If you have extra cable and don't want to cut and solder a new connector, coil the extra into a figure 8 and tuck it somewhere safe. I'm sure someone will question the reasons for the figure 8, but just trust me on that one -- I haven't steered you wrong yet, have I?

Anyway, after you get everything installed, hook it up and check your SWR. And by "check" I mean just make sure it's below about 3:1. The SWR meter is frequently used to tune antennas and that's fine, but don't obsess about getting it down to 1:1 because the SWR meter is not the best meter to tune an antenna. However, it -is- a good meter to tell if you have a major malfunction like a shorted coax or dirty antenna stud, and that's when you will get an SWR of 3:1 or worse.

And I still recommend finding a good book on the subject. You said you are broke, but public libraries are free (and they are a great place to waste time and meet brainy chicks). There have been several books written about CB radio. Probably the most common is Radio Shack's "All About CB Two-Way Radio", which would serve well as the definitive CB Radio FAQ. It even has a pictoral description on how to install a ball-mount.

Take your time. Do what you think would be a professional job and you shouldn't have any problems. Then start talking and enjoy the chaos of CB radio.

You just need a plug, 1/8" mono. Rat Shack has them, part #274-286. If you can't solder, they might have one with screw terminals, or you might find an old plug with the wires still on it and splice them together. The wire colors are to match the phase of two stereo speakers and shouldn't matter when using just one speaker. 4 ohms is fine, just don't crank it up like a sub-woofer.

Thanks so much for all your adivce man. I really appreciate it. I also checked my spare bedroom, and found 2 10 watt 8ohm speakers as well.
You've gotten me wanting to try the antenna mount deal now. I hear people talking about the 9' whip in almost every forum I go. Where do I get it, and I also hear it is pretty cheap compared to other antennas, and what i have read people seem to like that antenna.

I have a magnet mount that i purchased with my police scanner. It comes in parts
http://www.radioshack.com/product.asp?catalog%5Fname=CTLG&product%5Fid=20-032 or Catalog #: 20-032 if the link doesn't work.

I was thinking that maybe I could take it apart, and add it to my antenna that i am using for my cb. In order to do that I would have to use one of the little black connectors that you see in the photo, not sure what they are called. I just don't know if those little black thingies would cause interference or what. I did check and my cb antenna would fit perfectly in that connector. that would make it almost 50", not sure what i difference it would make

9' whips are cheap because they are just a whip -- no loading coil, no magnets, no matching networks, no nothing. It is the fundamental 1/4-wave vertical and is the most efficient mobile antenna you can get for CB radio.

This will NOT work. You need a primer in antennas. Basically, they have a specific length for the frequency to be used. CB radio uses frequencies around 27 MHz, which translates into a 1/4-wave vertical of about 9'. Lower frequencies require longer antennas; higher frequencies require shorter antennas. Scanners cover a very wide range of frequencies, and therefore require a very special antenna.

Maybe Jay or some other antenna guru can explain this better or point you to a good page.

They are criminal. As soon as you get it through you thick head that You are completely off the rails. Why else would you tune a radio's you do, then you will affect your signal on the receive end.

Ok, let's run with that. Are you saying that lowering the power to 3 watts will not have any difference on your signal?

It certainly will. People are duped into believing that a peak job will make them "put out better". How else do you put out a better signal without increasing the power? My point, of course, is that the amount of power increase available from a peak job, is not significant enough to make it worth what "screwdriver technicians" charge.

That is but one type of compression. For a more detailed discussion of RF amplifier compression, please refer to the following related link:

http://cp.literature.agilent.com/litweb/pdf/5965-7710E.pdf

Generally speaking, amplifier compression occurs when the input:output power ratio no longer increases db for db.

There are a bunch of very talented engineers here who would be a bit

Usually, if it is a push-pull design, device matching plays an important part. Bias is also important, as is impedance matching. But even a "good" design should have a follow-up low pass filter to minimize any harmonic content.

You know that, I know that, most knowledgable people know that, and I suspect Twisty knows that as well. He just likes to argue for the sake of arguing.

It's true that most CB "S" meters are far from linear, and consistent.
On the lower part of the scale, 1 "S" unit might be only 2 or 3 db. At the upper end, 1 "S" unit might be closer to 10db. But the theory is sound.

Sort of like you are struggling with by attempting but failing to distant yourself from the incompetent "felon" remarks you have incorrectly made.

Only because you're an incompetent who wrongly believes they were illegal in the first place. Nevertheless, tuning a 4 watt radio will not affect any "S" unit on the voodoo bullshit that is found in your posts from your claim of making a Davemade "spectrally pure" (something which you are unable to define,

Lowering the deadkey to 3 watts.

Only you seem to be having problems with what I said. In the first manner, you had to be taught (once again) the answer as to why one would "otherwise do it" (peak and tune) because your one track mind can only process one idea at a time. The fact that you had to ASK what else could be done, in realization, shows you were unable to grasp the "lowering the deadkey" reason. Now that you were educated better, you are taking it and "running" with it.
Once again,,,,
I said a peak and tune on this radio will not result in a net change (increase of S units) and you began menstruating....again.

Again, this is your incompetence and voodoo bullshit. Educate yourself, oh self-annointed radio cop, psychiatrist, doctor of jurisprudence, and self-elevated-and-referred-radio-tech.

>Why else would you peak a radio?

After watching you post regarding such peaks, I'm certain the world would like to know exactly what you did to all those cb radios to increase those S units. In fact, "spectrally pure" WERE your words regarding the Davemade. I suggest you review your incompetencies prior to denying them.

Jim has yet to answer, but here you are answering for him, Davie. What confidence you display. Again, for the record, Jim, are you in agreement that a "peak and tune" will increase S units on a 4 watt stock radio?

I exchanged ideas on this subject and in this thread with sideband and

This isn't grade school Davie, and you aren't the principle who gets to dole out punishment.. I suggest you grow up and stop drawing analogies between yourself and the past, most recently, your grammar school years.

  Keeping it closer to home, you, unprovoked and on many occasion, have called me and others, a criminal and a felon many times for nothing more than our posting topics discussing dx activities.

>I believe the term I used was "criminal".

It is difficult to present a belief as incorrect, but you have managed quite effectively. You most certainly not only used the term, but arrogantly, ignorantly, and incorrectly argued your position of why you thought dxing was a felony.

> "Felon" was the term you juxtaposed with >"criminal" and I suppose I might be partially to >blame for not correcting you, and I left it go.

Juxtaposed? No dither Davie, you argued for days before being taught what constitutes a civil matter verses a criminal matter, yet are still menstruating, er,, illustrating you have great difficulty comprehending what distinguishes each.

Take into consideration your position just a few short years ago of using amps, illegal peaking and tweaking and converting of radios and claiming cbers are more fun and less uptight (than hammies) because they are "regular folk", and you are the shining epitome of hypocrisy.

>You still don't get it do you? I have tried to say

Your posts are chock full of you attacking people for doing exactly what you just said you don't do. In fact, you have inferred that people are inconsiderate, rude, criminal, and selfish for the exact acts you claim above. Strong words, indicating you most certainly DO care, and your long threads justifying your attacks support such,

>I sided with the "Legal" crowd because, as a >matter of fact, the behavior which you defend

>so vehemently

You have yet to provide for your incorrect but misguided claims,,,,,no surprise there.

>(yet peculiarly cannot acknowledge the

There it is again, that incompetence on display for the world. What part of "I selectively disregard the dx law" is it that is causing such struggles of comprehending such basic communications within you, mah' boy?

>I still maintain that the CB'ers I knew (and >many of whom have been immortalized on my

That's part of the job you have been given here, Davie,,,,to immortalize cbers. What was never meant, was for you to destroy own reputation in the process. That was a complete accident.

This is the place where I tame your unbridled ignorance and arrogance concerning the United States and the laws regarding the conviction of a crime. Under the laws of this great country, one is only a criminal when found guilty in a court of law.

>That is little more than an argument in >semantics.

It's the law of the land.

It's the law of the land.

>I'm sure there are murderers running around >free on the street because they haven't been

No it doesn't, but the fact remains, they are innocent UNTIL PROVEN GUILTY BY A COURT OF LAW. That you have trouble grasping this fact is troubling enough. That you disagree with it illlustrates your disdain for what makes this country great.

 I note you have been forced to distance yourself from your claim that a dxer is a felon and you are now, albeit still incorrectly, attempting to call those who commit acts you disagree with (and that you have committed yourself on numerous occasion) a "criminal" as opposed to a felon.

>I have always maintained that anyone who >breaks the law is a "criminal"

Yes you have, in addition to incorrectly calling a dxer a "felon".

>The dictionary would agree with me.

The dictionary says nothing of dxing.

>I've provided the logical progression in the >past on what constitutes the law, crime, and a >criminal.

You provided nothing but personal opinion that was shown to be wrong.

>You added the term "felon" as synonymous >with criminal.

No Davie, you called dxing a felony. At least you recognize your ignorance based on your attempts to try and say you never said it.
Perhaps you need a reminder of where you argued that a dxer is a felon.

Everyone knows you are an angry, dejected hammie that claims society is reflected on the cb and that you sit around pining for the "olden days".

>No one but you thinks that.

Ask around whose beliefs are more in line with the average cber. This offer was made before to you, but just like everything else, you run.

>I told you before, you are little more than Actualy, davie, it was I that said such about you long ago. Remember, I am the cartoon character of which you seek personal information.

Can always tell when the right is frustrated and worried.

Everyone knows you mislabeled many good, decent ops as "criminals" and
"felons" without so much as an admittance you were wrong or apology, but alas, everyone knows what you are about.

>Why should I apologize for something which is >factually correct?

Can't debate with you when you insist on remaining ignorant, nevertheless, talking dx does not make one a felon as you claimed in all your infinite and self-pofessed wisdom.

>If you engage in freebanding, you ARE >breaking the law. There are no if's and's or >but's about it.

Say it again. Repeat it. Perhaps you will convince yourself that someone disagreed with you on this notion. Now THAT's...entertainment.

> Sorry if you don't like the feel of the shoes

>you chose to wear.

I love my dxing AND freebanding. You are the only one that has labored exhaustively to illustrate your incompetence.

> But pretending that the emperor has no >clothes, doesn't change the facts.

Agreed, so why is it such a great feat to egt you to comprehend such?

>Which operators are "good" or "bad" is a >subjective matter of opinion.

Yes, but calling one a "felon" is not, yet, you disgracefully (to all hammies) took such action.

>I don't consider >the mental midgets who "squash mud ducks"

>to be "good" operators.

And the majority of this group don't consider those who call cbers felons for dxing reasonable, educated, ot clued.

>They have little consideration for their fellow >citizens.

>If you were a straight up real man, and would >say something like "Yea, I operate illegally, so >what?",

You can't even define what constitutes the law, let alone sexuality. You admitted your low self-esteem and ego is soothed via agitation. You are the only one having a self-debate regarding the legalities of freebanding.

>I'd have more respect for you.

You have no respect for yourself, you can have none for anyone else.

>But you won't even acknowledge that what >you do is illegal, and (vainly) deny that you do >anything wrong..

Your incompetency and deficiency is screaming. You are the only person on this group that has ever made such a claim and the only one to believe such, as never have I denied dxing or freebanding is illegal, but it does provide an opportunity, albeit another failed one, for you to try and deny you called dxers a felon.

For the future, so you don't embarrasss yourself further, calling one a felon or criminal when they haven't been convicted of a crime by a court of law is about as valid as one accusing you of being a convicted pedophile.

>There's a big difference between someone >who is guilty of an illegal activity who just >hasn't been caught yet, and a groundless >accusation.

Only in your eyes. One is innocent until proven guilty, regardless your personal opinion of this law.

>I have never partaken in any activity which >could be remotely considered pedophilia.

Taking into consideration your unsolicited claims regarding your acts of breaking federal law by listening to underaged girls private conversation speaking of their first sexual encounters on a cordless phone during the Melrose Place years (which you compared it to) and referring to it as "juicy" gives pause for the cause.

>You,

>on the other hand, break federal law on the >daily basis.

You have no manner in knowing what I do, whatsoever. You work with what you are given. Period (no pun intended).

There is only one jacket and you've been waring and defending it with

No, that's WRONG. Another shining example of your inability to comprehend. I stated that peaking a 4 watt radio will improve that radio's signal to another's receive station. But that improvement will be very minimal, as it takes 6db (4x increase) more in power to gain 1
"S" unit on the received end.

Ha ha ha ha!!! Like the McDonald's theme (da da da da da!----- I'm lovin' it!). You, who chastise other people for seeking out personal information on other people, are now trying to do it to me?

What a flaming hypocrite!

The really great part is that you SUCK as a researcher, and you prove it more and more with each post you make. You couldn't even find the information on the CB'er who was cited for disturbing the peace in Norristown. Now you think you found out something? One nice thing about having a common last name, there are thousands of people with it. Is this "teacher" the "Kim T. Hall" you referred to in an earlier post? (chuckle). Well who is she? My mother? Wife? Sister?
Niece? Please, by all means, let us all know would you? Maybe she's someone who owes me money, and I need to know so I can collect it now.....

The thought of you bent over your little WebTV with your eyes squinted and crossed with pronounced crow's feet developing as you vainly search for some little tidbit of information about me, is simply hilarious. Thank you for the chuckle. I haven't laughed this hard in a few weeks.

Projection is another of your obvious mental flaws. What you claim as my adoration for you, is in fact the reverse. You can't resist the urge to throw your comments in on any post that I make.

You are a man with an obsession.........

Would you like me to send you a recent picture of myself so that you can cast the statue in the proper context?

Don't worry, I'll be in the neighborhood in a week or so. Maybe I can give you what it is that you truly seek.......... Try not to slobber too much though. I really hate a person with poor manners......

LOL dave you have really nailed him this time. Twisted and his pals are birds of a feather like mopedope and the other sock puppets, the chief weapon they have is to dig up personal info on hams while they hide behind the cloak of total anonymity. Of course mopedope has taken

When you have the time could you make me a list of everything I need to do the side mount or ball mount antenna. I want to go for the 9' whip, and plus I will be able to learn along the way. I'm even gonna practice on the soldering. Can all of this be purchased atr Radio Shack in case i can't find it anywhere else. If you think one is easier and just as good as the other then we can just shoot for the parts for the one you think a newbie should start with. Waiting on your reply so I can head to the store :)

You should know me by now -- I just -have- to disagree. The use of the term 'compression region' is really a misnomer. It's properly described as a nonlinear region. The reason is that different devices behave differently, and while a few devices (some transistors, a few tubes, incandescent lightbulbs) have nonlinear characteristics similar to compression, the fact is that nothing is being 'compressed', and the vast majority of other devices have nonlinear regions that do not resemble compression. And whether that nonlinear region is gradual or sharp, it's still clipping because it's a limitation of the device. It also causes distortion that is characteristic of clipping. And yes, saturation is within the nonlinear region.

I'll give him this one. This may be a matter of semantics, like noting the difference between 'weight' and 'mass'. I had these things drilled into my brain by my profs for the simple reason that using the wrong term can cause a misunderstanding. And that's what I believe is happening when people substitute the term 'compression' for when the transistor has exceeded the limits of linearity and subsequently clips, be it hard or soft.

But no matter what you call it, the result is distortion.

I'll stick with my definition. And while I may take issue with some of the more liberal definitions used by engineers these days, I should point out that I worked for HP (Agilent) several years ago and I'm not a big fan of their engineering department.

Absolutely. But even filters have limitations. Assuming Brian's amp has 350 watt noise figures in the neighborhood of -18 to -24 dB (not unrealistic), it would take a mighty stout filter to clean it up!

I was a BE up until a couple months ago. Currently I'm subcontracting audio equipment maintenance with the station, but that leaves me with all the self-employment costs. It's almost not worth the effort. And even the subcontracting may not last because the station is expected to fall within months. I'm thinking about a new career doing a little

I'll have to get back to you on that. And the 9' whip may not be the best choice for a van because you would have to install the mount low, and a good portion of the antenna is going to be right next to the body of the van. Do you have a pic of your van (or one of the same make/model)? That would help to suggest a good spot.

After some research...I'd say it's a "good amp". Without knowing age/condition, 400 sounds a little high. A better price would be 250-300.

I can't see it pushing 800 watts either. Maybe good for 600-650.

Hope that helps:-)

I wouldn't even try a ball-mount on that. The previous suggestion of a Wilson 1000 (or just about any other medium-sized whip) dead center on the roof would be better, although I wouldn't put a 9' whip up there.
Myself, I would probably make a bracket to fit between the fender and hood close to the front, use a medium whip for driving around town, and keep a 9' whip in the van for long-distance road-trips or DXing from hilltops.

I was just given a Cobra 21GTL, I don't know if it's 23 or 40ch, only that it's AM only. There was no power cord for it, i look at the back side and I see 3 prongs, one marked + the other side is marked - and a unmarked one off center near the - prong. I'm thinking that was just there to make sure the plug was put in right and not backwards. So I should be able to rig up my own plug or just attach wires to the to outer ones and color code them.

I've not bought one online before but you can call 1-800-541-6116 to find a dealer. You can read about it all over the place, but I think the most complete info can be found at http://www.wilsonantenna.com/ .

I got my latest one used, but I have bought them new in the past. I was also a dealer for a while down here in Fl.

Wilsons are not cheap. Especially the mag mount. But I'll bet you'll love it once you get it. I wouldn't use any other antenna ('cept maybe that 9' whip if it weren't so damned ugly). My van is new. '04. I wouldn't want to uglify it with that 1/4 wave mobile ground plane. The Wilson looks way better. Especially on a black van with tinted windows. Looking creapy like that is way better than looking stupid. lol. :-P

I'd buy a wilson center loaded antenna with a lip mount and put it left side where windshield cowling meets the hood....ON the the hood. It would look like a radio antenna and get out fairly well.

Sure the wilson 1000 mag mount would work better dead center of the roof...but geez, that's 6' friggin' feet sticking up above your van!! You'd get sick and tired of wiping it out every time you go through a fast-food line or a parking garage...not to mention just pulling it in to your garage at home:-)

Well, I did anyway:-) I got a wilson little wil for the back of my passat....it works just fine.

Good luck

There you are again, first one making a connection between HEAD and sex.
Then, you bring up "gays"?
Accident? Coincidence? I think not.

I'll derail your train of thought and get back on topic however.

I agree... A 9' whip is a good antenna. It will help you get your signal out farther. But...

When I was adjusting the antenna on my truck, I had the SWR as good as I could get it, right around 2. The reading was about 1.8 on the lower channels, but I didn't want to cut any more off my antenna and risk over adjusting. It's a ~64" whip, mounted to the toolbox in the bed of my truck (reflections from the body of the truck are probably also partially to blame).

I showed my father my readings, and asked him:

"If this were your radio, and there year was 1980, would you accept these readings?"

I asked the question this way because he's got an electrial engineering background, is a total perfectionist, and in 1980 would have put both of those qualities to use on his radios.

His response was this...

"I used to invest lots of time and money into trying to achieve the mystical 1.1 SWR ratio. The truth of the matter is, even if your radio is adjusted perfectly, most likely the other guy's won't be. Even if he can hear you, you may not be able to hear him, which doesn't do you any good. Not to mention that there are enough buildings and hills around to have a greater affect on your signal range than having a perfect SWR reading."

A base station would be a different story, but basicly, what he told me was that for a mobile setup, there are too many variables to hinder your communications for a 9' whip to really be that benneficial.

I'm not seeing the relationship between a 1:1 SWR and a 9' whip. The 9' whip is great, and anybody who has ever used one knows that.

And it doesn't really matter what antenna or SWR the other guy has because transmit and receive are reciprocal; i.e, whether the loss is due to poor SWR, a dinky whip or a leaky coax, if your antenna system loses 3dB in transmit it will lose 3dB in receive. The only way to reach a weak signal is with an amp. But if you use too much amp you will talk over people you can't hear, which is why amps are illegal for CB (and that's also why hams are required to use the least amount of power to make their contacts). Like I said before, you will always have weak signals. If they can't hear you, either be satisfied that you can hear them or turn down the RF gain.

I should also point out that the best antenna is not always the preferred choice. Sometimes you want a poor antenna to talk short, stay out the range of trolls, and keep the noise to a minimum. When I was in college I found out that a rubber-ducky is ideal for tailgate parties! Just a different perspective......

That's what makes discussion interesting. Unless, of course the other party is nameless sociopath..... ;-)

A device can be non-linear without going into compression. The way I learned it, compression is a specific term that applies when a normally linear device loses linearity as it approaches it's maximum drive level.

Exactly! That's why compression refers to a specific condition, so as to differentiate it from other forms of non-linerarity. Certain class "C" "Modulator" type amplifiers, for example, deliberately run in the non-linear region just above device cutoff, to take advantage of the "swing" effect of the device. It's non-linear, but it's not compressed.

> And whether that nonlinear region is gradual or

I differentiate the term "clipping" from "compression" by the application in which the terms are used. In an application such as a broadband amplifier with a broad spectrum of carriers (Such as a CATV amp), is applied to the input, the term compression applies as you reach the point of non-linear gain and the incidents of composite second order beats rises disproportionately.

I look at "clipping" as a momentary chopping off of an otherwise linear signal reproduction, such as what you would encounter with AM modulation peaks which run out of headroom in an amplifier, which would otherwise be still in the linear range when unmodulated. You can still "clip" while not being fully into compression.

Maybe I'm over-analyzing these terms, but that's me.....

While the link I provided, was put out by Agilent, it was one of many examples. I don't work for them either, but I do work with some talented RF engineers, and we use the term compression frequently to describe the point where linear gain ceases, and distortion products increase disproportionately.

A sad but true reality in this modern age of broadcasting. The "mom and pop" radio stations can no longer compete in the big money corporate arena.

There was a time when I was seriously considering a career in broadcasting. I was tossing a coin over whether I wanted to be a broadcast engineer or radio personality. But when the rules changed and radio stations started getting bought out by bottom-line oriented corporations which stick to canned format formulas, and discourage individualism, I lost my taste for the talent side of the business.
When I found out what a typical engineer was making, that soured me as well. Only those at the top stations in major market areas, make any real money.

It's a shame. I grew up listening to some real radio talent (Who didn't have to mention bodily functions every few minutes to get a laugh). I really liked the Drake/Chenault "Boss Radio" format which started at KHJ in Los Angeles and migrated to my area at some really great stations like WFIL in Phila, and WABC in New York.

It really was a "dream job" for alot of us then.....

Relive some of that time:

The problem is the application; i.e, the operational limits of the device. More below.

.....huh? That statement looks like a train-wreck. Assuming we're talking Class C for both types, a device is usually pushed towards -saturation-, and the result is clipping which forms a psuedo-square wave that packs more energy than a sine wave, and making the stage more efficient (a design that evolved into the Class E amplifier).
Also, Class C devices are -biased- above cutoff by definition. But what is this "swing effect" you describe? I have never heard of a -device- having such an effect unless it was a self-resonant device.
Last time I checked, most transistors don't tend to be self-resonant below 30 MHz.....

> It's non-linear, but it's not >compressed.

That's the point. It's -not- compressed. I see no reason to place that label on a portion of a curve only because it loosly resembles one of the characteristics of compression yet doesn't fall within its definition. To me it's like using the word 'pill' to describe an RF transistor, or 'swing' to describe modulation.

I see the image in your brain -- "clipping" suggests a straight-line cut from the top of the wave. And I understand your definition of 'compression' as the transitional zone between linearity and clipping.
But clipping, by definition, is caused when the signal exceeds the limits of the device. And that's exactly what happens when the output is pushed into the nonlinear region because it's operation is intended to be limited to the linear region (otherwise it's not a linear amp).

I've known many talented engineers who learned switch terminology backwards: for example, they would describe a 6-position rotory switch as a 6-pole single-throw. I've known some talented engineers who didn't know the difference between 'active' and 'passive'. I've even known a couple talented engineers who thought electrons flowed from positive to negative. I guess I'm just anal (like THAT'S a suprise!).

Don't forget that as you increase the power you need to increase the attenuation. This is because of the changes in the equipment rules regarding harmonic emissions. The limit is now absolute whereas before it was relative to signal strength. Regardless, a LP filter won't filter the splatter.

When that was canceled it was the beginning of the end of radio, IMHO.

Best of luck! I got out of self employment last January and am quite happy,
I was a touring audio engineer during the summer tour season and did audio repair and engineering for radio in winter and between gigs. Although I do miss life on the road sometimes it IS nice to have a schedule.

Audio repair, eh? Did you learn about Peavey's dual-diode bias scheme the easy way or the hard way?

I know, swing is not a technical term, but I don't know what else to call it besides non-linear (distorted) modulation gain. A Class "C" amplifier is biased below cutoff (Hence the improved efficiency) so if your drive level is barely above that point, the region of gain there is significantly non-linear. At 2 watts of drive, the gain might be 6db. By the time drive hits 8 watts, it might be 10 db. The "swing effect", then results in a radio with a 2 watt carrier modulating to 100% at 8 watts, feeding into an amp and coming out with an 8 watt carrier with modulation peaks reaching 80 watts. It's dirty, it's distorted, but it sure makes that wattmeter swing forward...

But the point of my example was to illustrate that not all non-linearity is a result of continual overdrive (Compression) or momentary overdrive (Clipping).

Don't shoot me, I'm only the messenger. Whether or not the term is factually accurate, it is in common use. I adopted it from working with those who used it, and many other support companies which offer technical seminars on various conditions of amplification.

Stop right there. You've got it. Clipping is when you exceed the absolute limits of the device to amplify further. Compression is less severe, the device can still amplify, but it is no longer linear db in for db out.

That's the difference between the "hole" theory and the "electron" theory. I admit that current flowing from positive to negative makes more "sense", even if it has been shown to be the opposite.

That's only true above a certain power output. I believe it's 1 KW but my mind's a little foggy on the exact level. Below those limits, harmonic content is still rated relative to dbc. It makes little sense to use absolute levels which would be higher than the -dbc ratings in a "low" power amp. -40dbc from a 1 KW amp is100 mW. But if CB makers were allowed to spec harmonic output at 100 mW, that would be much worse than current specs.

I don't think Brian is playing in the big leagues yet. ;-)

>Regardless, a LP filter won't

That's certainly true. That has to be handled in the biasing, feedback, and by keeping drive levels in the linear range of the devices.

Hello Don M-Tech:

Yes I think your right! Yes you are.

So that throws out the SD1446 pill diameter of .370 to .380 inches, comparison method.

Because both the 2SC2789 and MRF454 transistors use the 211-11 transistor case. Which has a .5 or 1/2 inch white pill diameter.

http://www.alldatasheet.com/datasheet-pdf/pdf/MOTOROLA/MRF454.html

Ok so back to un soldering the wire over the pill, to see what ya all got.

I am sorry, but I was so unimpressed with the Messenger 4 pill with the 2SC2789 transistors, it did only 320 watts while being driven with 35 watts. I hope those guys get it fixed.

I had the Messenger rewired and modified in a trade, the amp guy removed the 4 ea 2SC2789, and installed 8 ea SD1446 transistors, and that amp then kicked ass. I could now hear the 150 amp alternator start to slip the belt on peaks, hehehehehehehe.

Bring a main dish and a side dish, and a few drinks. Call 44 or give him

Camp fires are allowed, but he doesn't need a barn burner, and bring windy winter, a curtsy call here.

Shottin skip and talkin on the radio is ok, but be nice. 44 just had new

And please only shoot away from the houses. The wind mill generator has enough bullet holes in it from 44 gettin all liquirored up and shooting it him self. And please no unsafe and insaine fire works. Ok well maybe just a few. (just passing it on here!)

Bring a main dish and a side dish, and a few drinks. Call 44 or give him a yell on 12, or 435, or the SSSS channel. To coordinate the eats and drinks. But it should be pretty well handled by now.

Camp fires are allowed, but he doesn't need a barn burner, and bring your own wood. As steve uses his wood to heat his house in the cold windy winter, a curtsy call here.

Shottin skip and talkin on the radio is ok, but be nice. 44 just had new carpets put in, so please take off your shoes at the door. 44 will have the "Super Crusader 7" element yagi up and runnin.

One other thing 44 pass's on, trash cans will be placed all over so the he doesn't need 4.8 billion empties and trash all over the place.

Jay in the Great Mojave Desert.... just down the road ah ways from the fillin station.

Like I said, I understand what you mean by the 'compression region'. I just think it's not the appropriate label, mainly because nothing is compressed. I still think that 'clipping' is more appropriate, and I

You and I both recognize that current flow and electron flow are not the same thing, and so do most engineers. But the engineers I negative. Maybe it is under certain circumstances, but I haven't been

If Brian appears and brings an open mind, maybe I'll show him how to use predistortion in the bias regulator to linearize the output. But that's a big 'if'.

(thanks Max H.) Ever taken apart a 1200D powered mixer? One of my peavey peves :) Ranks up there with a root canal. I never want to see another one of those XLR jacks again :)

I was also the undisputed king of the DPC line of amps because we serviced a nation wide DJ service that had hundreds of them. I can do those with my eyes closed, If you ever need a hand on those I know most all of the "tricks". They can be intimidating at first but there's ways to make them easy. Those IGBT's are quite expensive!

Mackie is a headache with screws, Kurtzweil is the worst, yadada yadada. I could talk shop and stupid musicians for days. Maybe I should attend the

No, nothing that elaborate. Just simple basic stuff, but it's the stuff that CB'ers seem to flock to, even if it isn't the cleanest use of amplification devices.

You will find this true in many cases. But unless I'm in a position to correct the error, I just go with the flow, rather than calling unwanted attention to myself for making (standing) waves....

Ok, try looking at it this way, in the audio sense of the term
"compression", a dynamic range of 90db, is often squashed into a range of less than 70db. In the RF amplifier sense, the amount of change for every 1 db of input signal changes from 1 db on the output to an amount less than that. A large variation of change (within the region of compression) on the input results in less of a range on the output.
That change is therefore "compressed".

I actually knew a technician many years ago who thought that it would take a few seconds for CATV signals several miles away to bleed off after a line amp was disconnected. Hey, we're talking RF here not water pressure! Sheesh!

Can you do that for RF amps? I've heard of the technique, but thought is was strictly for audio amps.

Since we are on the subject of the 102" whip, this isn't far off topic.
About 15 years ago, I knew this guy that delivered mail from K.C. to St.L.
He decided one day to co-phase a pair of 102" whips on his truck. He mounted them to the bottom of the mirror bracket, tilted them forward, then put a bend in the middle. it still dragged the bottom of the overpasses, but it sure looked impresive.

No, he CLAIMS to be a ham, but he spends all of his time and energy in a C.B. ng, which proves to me that he is most likely a CBer. Unfortunately, he is probably the type of CBer that harasses truck drivers and plays music over the air. Isn't that right Georgie boy?

Amateur Radio Newsline™ Report 1417 October 8, 2004

Amateur Radio Newsline report number 1417 with a release date of Friday, October 8, 2004 to follow in 5-4-3-2-1.

The following is a Q-S-T. A New Jersey radio club makes a big donation to the local community and hams in Great Britain may get more privileges on 40 meters. These stories and more on Amateur Radio Newsline report number 1417 coming your way right now.

PUBLIC SERVICE: RADIO CLUB DONATES $400,000 TO NJ PARK

A radio club has donated $400,000 to Essex County, New Jersey. This, to pay for renovations already made to Irvington Park where the club has its headquarters. And there's more money on the way. Amateur Radio Newsline's Henry Feinberg, K2SSQ, has the rest of the story:

According to a story in the September 29th edition of the Newark Star Ledger, the $400,000 donated by the Irvington Amateur Radio Team came from the states Green Acres program. It will be used to pay part of the $1.1 million in renovations that included new tennis courts, basketball courts, benches and a track.

The club, a nonprofit organization that volunteers as keepers of the park. It is expecting another $500,000 in Green Acres funds to pay for the second phase of the parks upgrade. Phase I of the $2 million overall was completed during early summer. Phase II, scheduled to begin next year, will include a second floor addition to the field house, where the radio club has its headquarters.

Phase I was completed during early summer. Phase II, scheduled to begin next year, will include a second- floor addition to the field house, where the radio club has its headquarters. The funds obtained by the club have been matched by Essex County.

Charles Freeman, N2JGC, is the clubs president. He says that the park renovations have boosted community pride.

Freeman: "Its all volunteerism. Its a bunch of wonderful people who dedicate their time and service to I-ART - the Irvington Amateur Radio Team, the Office of Emergency Management, CERT, and any way we can get involved in helping out our community."

Feeeman says that this has helped get some of the children off the street by getting them involved in computers and amateur radio.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm Henry Feinberg, K2SSQ.

The club brought its headquarters to the park in 1998. Soon after, members became the primary caretakers of the facility. (Star-Ledger, ARNewsline(tm))

RESTRUCTURING: VICTORIA VK HAMS LOOSE LOWER HALF OF 70CM

The bottom half of the 70 centimeter band is no longer available for amateur radio in most of Australia's Victoria state. This, as the result of a new exclusion zone that has just become law. W-I-A reporter Jim Linton VK3PC explains:

The ACA has prohibited all amateur radio activity on the 420-430 MHz band within Victoria in an area of up to a 250 kilometre radius of the Melbourne General Post Office. That band will now be used for a new state-of-the-art digital radio system to replace the current analogue systems of the Victoria Police, Metropolitan Ambulance Service and Metropolitan Fire Brigade.

The exclusion zone has been anticipated and comes after other permanent Exclusion zones were imposed for similar purposes around Perth and Sydney, including the Australian Capital Territory. The band 420-430 MHz has been used for amateur fixed links and amateur television. The WIA has assisted with the timely closure and migration of those links in Victoria in liaison with the Bureau of Emergency Services Telecommunications and the ACA.

The new digital voice and data radio system now being installed for Emergency services will also provide common coordination channels to support multi-agency response to major incidents and events. The aim is to have it fully operational well in advance of the Melbourne Commonwealth Games in 2006. This has been

Jim Linton VK3PC for WIA National News.

Where else the A-C-A will impose these exclusion zones is not known as we go to air. (WIA News)

RESTRUCTURING: MORE 40 METERS FOR UK HAMS

Meantime there is much better news coming from the U-K. That's where Ofcom -- the Office of Communications -- says that it might change the rules and give that nations hams more access to 40 meters. Jeramy Boot, G4NJH, is in Nottingham with more:

Ofcom is proposing to vary the Foundation, Intermediate and Full amateur radio licenses to permit UK amateurs to operate in the band 7,100 to 7,200kHz.

The band would be allocated to the Amateur Service on a Secondary basis, and would be available on the basis of non-interference to other services, inside or outside the United Kingdom.

Ofcom announced a one-month consultation period beginning on 23rd September and all license-holders are invited to make representations to this proposal in writing or by e-mail.

Jeremy Boot, G4NJH

The cutoff date for U-K hams to comment on this proposed Notice of Variation to the nations Amateur Service rules is October 23rd. (GB2RS)

RESCUE RADIO: SATERN IN THE PUBLIC INTEREST

Ever hear of SATERN? Not the planet but a group of true helping hams that are always ready to serve the public need.

In our reports on the numerous hurricanes that hit the United States mainland the past few weeks we have often referred to several high frequency service nets. These include the Hurricane Watch Net, the Maritime Mobile Services Net and of coarse SATERN - the Salvation Army Team Emergency Network. You heard a lot of audio from the Hurricane Watch Net and the Maritime Mobile Services Net in our reports, but little of SATERN. That's because it was not really audible at our studio here on the U-S west coast. But we recently caught it being relayed on the Internet by K-A-4-E-P-S audio website and grabbed a few minutes of it in operation. Sometimes it takes nothing more than a referral to help out. Take a listen:

SATERN Net Audio. Hear it in the audio report at www.arnewsline.org.

Some of you may say that it sounds a little boring to just sit there hours on end, taking messages or directing people to a website. But that's an important part of the Salvation Army's job and the SATERN Net is one of its most important tools.

Major Pat McPherson, WW9E, explains it all on the SATERN website. He says that the Salvation Army Team Emergency Radio Network provides emergency communication support to the Salvation Army wherever needed. As a result, SATERN members have found themselves in tornadoes, floods, hurricanes, fires, aircraft accidents, bombings, earthquakes -- just to name the more expected types of emergencies.

In short, SATERN is not your ordinary radio club or net. Maybe not the most exciting to listen in on but it is ham radio in service to the public, at its very best. (ARNewsline(tm))

ENFORCEMENT: ENNIS COMMUNICATIONS IN $300,000 CONSENT DECREE

Turning to enforcement news, word that Emmis Communications has reached a $300,000 settlement with the Federal Communication Commission. This, after admitting that it broadcast indecent material on the airwaves.

Emmis owns 27 stations nationwide. The settlement comes in part from comments made by a nationally syndicated Chicago shock jock named Mancow Muller. Muller is an air personality at WKQX-FM and has been the source of every previous FCC fine issued to Emmis. To date that totals $42,000.

Besides the $300,000 payment, Indianapolis-based Emmis has also agreed to implement a company-wide plan intended to prevent future violations. (FCC)

ENFORCEMENT: ONE LAST CHANCE FOR K1MAN

The FCC appears to be giving Glenn Baxter, K1MAN, one final chance to strictly conform to the agency's Part 97 rules. This, before taking action against the Belgrade Lakes, Maine ham. The FCC's Daryl Duckworth, NN0W, explains:

Duckworth: "A warning letter went to Glenn Baxter, K1MAN, of Belgrade Lakes, Maine. Back in April of this year the Commission notified him of two areas of operation that would lead to enforcement action and / or designation for a hearing to determine his qualifications to remain a licensee. This is regarding deliberate interference to ongoing communications and using the station for pecuniary interest.

Copies of the warning notice were also went to the United States Attorney in the United States Department of Justice, District of Maine.

This is Daryl Duckworth, NN0W, reporting."

In the September 15th Warning Notice the FCC's Riley Hollingsworth tells Baxter that the Commission has received approximately a dozen complaints that K1MAN Amateur Radio transmissions started on top of ongoing communications of individual operators, as well as on top of ongoing communications of the Salvation Army Team Emergency Radio Net. Hollingsworth says that this is a net that has been handling health and welfare traffic for this season's hurricane victims.

As to the pecuniary interest allegation, the FCC says that this is because Baxter's website lists a bulletin service transmission schedule and items for sale on the same pages. The FCC says that this is in violation of Sections 97.113(a)(2)and (3) of its rules.

Hollingsworth ends the letter by saying that failure to correct the violations will subject Baxter to enforcement action against his station and operator licenses. Baxter was given twenty days from the date the warning notice was issued to resoind. (FCC, RAIN)

ENFORCEMENT: FINE "KIND OF" REDUCED FOR GOOD BEHAVIOR

And a follow-up to a story we reported some time ago about a few unauthorized transmitters coming on the air in California. This, in 2003 around the time of Super Bowl thirty-seven. Amateur Radio Newsline's Bruce Tennant, K6PZW, is here with an update:

As listeners may recall, Global Radio, Inc. had requested that the FCC issue authority for it to operate on transmitters 89.1, 92.9, 93.7, 96.9, 104.1 and 106.9 Mhz. This, in conjunction with the Super Bowl thirty seven activities at Qualcomm Stadium in San Diego. T he FCC granted operation on 93.7 and 96.9 Mhz under the call sign WN3XFL, but it specifically denied Global's request to use 89.1, 92.9, 104.1 and 106.9 Mhz. This based on possible interference to existing stations in Mexico and the U.S. as outlined under bi-lateral agreements.

But on January 26, 2003, an agent from the San Diego FCC field office was listening to the FM band. He observed that WN3XFL was active and operating, without authorization, on 88.98, 104.1 and 106.9 Mhz. This, in addition to its permitted operations on 93.7 Mhz and 96.9 Mhz.

Global's willful violation of its operating authority initially resulted in a fine of $12,000. In its reply, the company claimed it could not pay that amount but the Commission didn't buy that argument. Global also argued that its otherwise unblemished compliance record should be taken into account.

Well, the FCC did just that. Well, kind of. Because of the unblemished record, the Commission reduced the fine by $1200. If you do the math, that's now a fine of $10,800 that Global has been told it has to pay.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm Bruce Tennant, K6PZW, in Los Angeles.

THE HAM BUSINESS WORLD: A HEALTHY C3I

Turning to the ham radio industry, C3I says that it is not out of the ham radio business. In fact, following a short pause to reassess the current business climate, the concern is shipping out products and its business as usual according to company owner Owen Wormser, K3CB.

Wormser: "We are fully operational. We have built up a good stock of out standard antennas. We have taken special orders the last two weeks. So, we have been able to recover in about two to two and a half weeks time."

--

C3I is a unique company that manufactures printed circuit board modules, VHF, UHF and Super High Frequency, high-performance Yagi antennas and related accessories for the Amateur Radio and land mobile market. RALPH WRIGHT (MIKE RIVERS), W5JVI - S.K.

More sad news to report with word of the passing of Ralph Wendel Wright, W5VJI. Better known to his many fans as Mike Rivers, Wright dominated the airwaves at radio station CKLW from 1967 to 1970.

Wright suffered a cerebral bleed in May from which he never recovered. He passed away at his home in Antioch, Tennessee on Monday night September 13th.

In addition to being a top rated air personality W5JVI was also a gifted musician, jingle writer, a master at radio production and a very active ham radio operator. No public memorial service was planned. (W2JKD)

THE CHANGING OF THE GUARD: FRANK TUREK, DL7FT - S.K.

Also, noted D-Xpeditioner, Frank Turek, DL7FT, became a "Silent Key" on August 17th. Over the years Turek traveled to many rare locations to hand out new country contacts to many operators worldwide. He is survived by his wife Siegrid, DL7CN, who will be handling QSL duties and will continue to keep the DL7FT Post Office Box open. (OPDX)

NAMES IN THE NEWS: RAC LEADERS RESIGN FOR HEALTH ISSUE

Two key officers of Canada's national Amateur Radio Society have stepped down for health related reasons. According to an RAC bulletin issued on October 5th, President Daniel Lamoureux, VE2KA, and First Vice-president Bob Nash, VE3KZ have resigned after having been hospitalized with heart related problems.

The bulletin says that the Radio Amateurs of Canada Board of Directors will convene a special meeting as quickly as possible. This, to deal with the vacancies created by these resignations. No date for the meeting has yet been announced. (RAC)

RADIO HEALTH: KOREAN RESEARCHERS CLAIM CANCER CONNECTION TO HIGH POWER RADIO TRANSMISSIONS

Korean scientists sat that they have found that regions near some A-M radio broadcasting towers show 70 percent more leukemia deaths than those without. This, according to Wired News which reports that the study, to be published in an upcoming issue of the International Archives of Occupational and Environmental Health, also found that cancer deaths were 29 percent higher near such transmitters.

Two years ago an Italian investigation found death rates from leukemia increased dramatically for residents living within two miles of Vatican Radio's powerful array of transmitters in Rome. The Koreans looked at the death rates in 10 regions with AM radio transmitting towers broadcasting at more than 100 kilowatts and compared them with control areas without transmitters.

The substantially higher cancer mortality in those who lived within two kilometers of the towers led researchers to conclude that more investigation was needed. However, they also said their study did not prove a direct link between cancer and the transmitters. (Published news reports)

HAM RADIO NEAR SPACE: A NEW ALTITUDE RECORD BY SIMSAT 1B

Pat Kilroy, N8PK, reports a new altitude record of over 112,900 feet was set by the SimSat-1B mission when it flew last week. Pat says that while the VHF telemetry failed early in the flight there are numerous clues as to why and the group is piecing the puzzle to help improve for future operations.

The Simulated Satellite or SimSat project is an education and outreach activity being developed by N8PK at the NASA Goddard Space Flight Center. A SimSat spacecraft uses a small high-altitude weather balloon platform to fly experiments designed and built by students to near-space altitudes.

In this case, a tiny CricketSat transmitter on UHF was also on board as a last minute hitchhiker. Powered by a standard 9 Volt alkaline battery and producing under 20 milliwatts, it operated all the way through splashdown and saved the day for tracking the flight.

More information and the part ham radio plays is on line at www.patkilroy.com/simsat on the World Wide Web. (N8PK)

HAM RADIO IN SPACE: MICROSAT ON DISPLAY

And some news from Dr. Perry Klein, W3PK, who says that The Smithsonian National Museum of American History has put a Microsat Mechanical Test Model on display in time for AMSAT's 35th Anniversary meetings. The satellite is suspended from the ceiling outside the NN3SI Smithsonian Amateur Radio Club station. That's located at "The Information Age" exhibit on the first floor at the West end of the American History Museum. (ANS)

HAM RADIO IN SPACE: SOLDERING ON-ORBIT

Meantime, the ham astronauts on the International Space Station have been trying to solder in zero gravity, and the results are intriguing. The NASA website says that the solder, heated, became a molten blob with a droplet of rosin clinging tight to the outside. As the temperature increased, the droplet began to spin, round and round, faster and faster, like a miniature carnival ride. You can see and enjoy the video of this experiment at at: http://science.nasa.gov/headlines/y2004/16aug_solder.htm (ANS)

THAT FINAL ITEM: ITS JOTA TIME

And finally this week, its time for scouts around the land to get together and take to the ham bands in the annual Jamboree on the Air. Amateur Radio Newsline's Mark Abramowicz, NT3V, is also a parent involved in the scouting program and has this inside look at the big event:

It's one of the best operating events of the year.

Why?

Because it showcases the best of our hobby to thousands of young people across the country and around the world.

For me, and others, it also gives us as operators a chance to reach out in brotherhood and friendship to young people. We get to serve as a bridge with our radios to other children and teens who share similar interests in Scouting.

Charlie Beck, chairman of Venture Crew 59, sponsored by the Frankford Radio Club and based out of Kutztown, PA is excited about his group's plans.

He says they will be operating KC3BSA from the Hawk Mountain Scout Reservation in Summit Station in eastern Pennsylvania.

"We're going to set up a couple stations in our science and tech center," Beck says.

At this point, he says you'll find Crew 59 on the HF bands on phone, CW and PSK 31. He says there are also plans to set up a VHF station and an EchoLink position.

Becks says the best part of the weekend event is getting visitors to the operation involved.

"I know we have some Girl Scout units and Cub packs and Boy Scout troops that will be stopping by," Beck explains. "They'll all get a turn to get on the air and try to make a contact with another Scout in another part of the world."

Beck says some get mike-shy, but that quickly dissolves with the help of a Venture Crew member sitting beside them.

"They'll be giving their name, their rank and talk about their hobbies and tell them where they're calling from which would be Schuylkill County in eastern Pennsylvania," Beck says.

Beck says the special part about JOTA is its diversity.

"There are Girl Scouts and Girl Guides. There's the World Association of Girl Guides and Girl Scouts that are invited to join in the JOTA," Beck says. "There's also a patch that the Girl Scouts can earn just like the Boy Scouts can earn for making contacts."

And, he says, for those who are a little shy about grabbing the microphone, there's also a keyboard.

"It's interesting to find the quiet Scout or the quiet boy to come in and sit down and get behind PSK 31 and really get in there and spend an hour chatting with different people around the world," Beck says.

Beck says Scouts across the country and around the world will be camping out and working radios from field conditions. Others will be going to stations of operators who've invited them in to take part.

Operators play a big part in making it happen and whether you've been a Scout in your lifetime isn't a factor. It's simply sharing the joy of the Amateur Radio service we've all come to appreciate.

Hope to hear you on the air during JOTA weekend.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm Mark Abramowicz, NT3V, in Philadelphia.

The 47th Jamboree on the Air takes place October 16th and 17th. More information is on line at www.scout.org/wse/jota.shtml and the Leagues website at www.arrl.org. (ARNewsline(tm))

You ever got alone with me you'd try to blow me and you know it, so stfu, sidewalk sissy. Your obsessive gay cravings will not be met. Cry and whine all you want, just like you did as a juvenile queen when you wanted candy and toys. HEHEHHE...Life is good when yer not a

Seems to us your word is IMPOTENT. As in not able to influence the AKC one bit.
Come on sidewalk sissy, tell us all how you have made anything at all change....nada, zip, zilch, zero, goose eggs.

You have made NOTHING happen except the AKC laughs like mad at you.
now, for the hundreth time, sissy: WE ARE HETEROSEXUAL, YOU CANNOT BECOME ROMANTICALLY INVOLVED WITH AN AKC MEMBER" Although, you could send yer wife, after she finishes her playtime at her sister's house.

Wrong answer, men's room troller. If it works with less than 50 watts drive and/or between 24 and 35 mhz, outta the box it is illegal. So,
YOU fuck off...but before you reply wipe that male hormone off your

The CB'ers who post here are keyclowns. A keyclown is also a seeker of intimacy with members of the same gender. Therefore, this is not "just a CB" newsgroup.
For example, take a look at Chukkee's bio. He posted it on the web long ago for all to read.

DONT USE COAX AT ALL, Attach the antenna jack of the radio directly to the jack at the base of the antenna. Then you will have perfect SWR.

Yes, but it does get a bit nippy in the winter to be hanging off a tower or Absolutely. One method is to tap the input signal to a small RF power transistor with similar nonlinear characteristics and use it to shunt the input to the final. That method also eliminates the need for a base resistor and improves bias regulation. Overall, the amp requires a little more drive power, but the benefits are well worth the costs.

There are other methods that work even better such as high-frequency OP-amps with nonlinear feedback, inductors with nonlinear saturation characteristics... just about any part of the circuit can be tailored to compensate for a nonlinear power device.

Never touched one, but I've never seen a mixer that wasn't a pain to things was either a super-genius or an LSD freak.

Mackie sucks. But Behringer kicks ass inside and out! The only thing I've -ever- had to do to a Behringer was replace the occasional busted

i found a place in southern indiana for a possible hook up next august. the reason for the site is its 15 or so miles north of louisville ky and seems to be easy to get to. louisville as its a decent airline destination. dream lake recreation area. doing a google someone posted that being topless and thongs are illegal in IN but there seems to be little enforcement of this law :) great fishing for those who want to get a line wet. if anyone has a comment on this site it would be more than welcome.

Hi all,

I picked up a un-used wilson V-1 5/8 wave CB base antenna. I had an old wilson catalog and see that the thing is 21 feet long, it does not have a set of ground plane elements. I would guess that this is one from the mid 70's

While the antenna was never used, the assembly instructions were missing. So, if anyone can send me a copy or tell me where I can locate it, I would really be graceful.

Thanks!

Jim, yes when keyclowns get together or hook up as you put it you guys

Actually, if you base your comparisons to "CB radios" the 2000 was equally as good as the 148gtl. It just had more bells and whistles. The board was pretty much the same. If you are going to compare it to today's "CB radios" I think it still holds it's own. On the other hand, if you compare it to 10 meter rigs* converted to work 11 meters, yes, it's junk.

Twist:

1. I don't have your email... Haven't for a couple of years. Mine's easy to find, if you know where to look. I've even been posting hints as to how to find it for years.... every time I post.
2. I mostly operate on the Amateur bands now, though I do run 19 to find out why I'm sitting in traffic, or to tell Swift he's a moron (like he doesn't know already, but it's still fun to yell at the guy who doesn't know how to keep it in his lane).
3. It wasn't voodoo.. Voodoo is expecting pushing over 100% modulation to make the radio "louder" on the receiving radio.... I've said it before, and I'll say it again.. 4 watts on one channel is alot louder than 40 watts on all 40.

The 29 has a better receiver in it than the 25 does, though both radios are single conversion.

To be honest, if you're looking at Cobra's, save yourself some money and look at the Uniden PC68 and the PC78. The '68 is the same radio as the '25 an the '78 is the same as the 29. Uniden used to make all of Cobra's boards, so the radios ended up with similar, if not exactly the same, schematics.

I'd go with the 29/78 myself, if I was looking for an AM only rig.

Okay, this is the mount I decided to order. I decided to go with this because it seems easy enough for a newbie.

Antenna Mount - http://www.firestik.com/images/ss-204a.jpg Model SS-204A

It says When you hold this mount in your hand you will start to recognize all of the mounting possibilities. Chances are, you will find several locations to mount it on your vehicle. For antennas up to 4ft in length. I'm going for this location http://www.niagara4x4.com/cbinstall.php on my van unless someone can tell me a better place.

Here is a pic of my van, well not mine, but exactly like this one

http://www.nctd.com/94/p94town.gif

I also ordered this:

http://www.firestik.com/images/plg-1.jpg

I figured what the heck, I may need it. When your antenna isn't in the mount you can screw one of these plugs in an keep the "nasty's" from making a new home. Thought it might be a good idea, only $1.50

http://www.firestik.com/images/ss-3h4a.jpg Heavy duty one

I didn't order the coax from the site because my local Truckstop sells the exact same thing rg-58, Coax Cable - http://www.firestik.com/images/k-8a.jpg

but if anyone thinks I should just go ahead and get this then I guess i will. I also didn't order the antenna either because my truckstop sells the firestick as well. Not sure how great they are, but I'm gonna give it a try. It's got to be better than my 36" magnet mount I hope anyway.

Now for my main question. What is Ground Plane and No Ground Plane? That has me a little confused. Where i am mounting it is completely metal. Does that mean good ground plane. I'm just confused as to what the whole Ground plane means. Sorry :(

Twithed Went up to Jersey----to the tune of "The devil went down to Georgia"

Twithed fag went up to Jersey
She was lookin for a cock to suck
At every truckstop in the southland
She'd plum run outta luck

Then she came across this faggot slurpin on a pekker
And suckin' it hot
So twithed jumped up on another fags cock
And said "Queer let me tellya what..."

"You suck pretty good dick my boy, but give my gay ass it's due..."
"I'll bet a gold dildo against your asshole..."
"cuz I think I'm better that you!"

The fag said "My name is trainedpuppet, and I've sucked dick since age ten"
"I'll take your bet, it aint no sweat...cuz I'm the queerest ever been!"

CHORUS
Trainfag put on your lipstick and get your weiner hard Cuz twithed's in from F-L-A, that fucking gay retard
And if you win you get a shiny dildo made of gold
But if you lose twithed pumps asshole!

MUSICAL BRIDGE-SOUNDS OF COCKS BEING SUCKED BY FAGGOT KEYCLOWNS

Twithed opened her overnite case and took out a pink nightgown
She said "I'll dress up just right, as a faggot assed keyclown."
Then she pulled her 1 inch pecker out and the keyclowns moaned with lust Landcarp and moped joined right in and the faggot sounds were thus...

MUSICAL BRIDGE-SOUNDS OF COCKS BEING SUCKED BY FAGGOT KEYCLOWNS

When twithed fisnished trainedpuppet said "You're a pretty decent fag"
"But sit yer ass down right there, and I'll suck dick 'til I gag!"

MUSICAL BRIDGE-SOUNDS OF COCKS BEING SUCKED BY FAGGOT KEYCLOWNS

Twithed bowed his head, he knew he'd been outclassed
Then he stuck that golden dildo all the way up trainfag's ass

Trainfag moaned "Twithed just come on back if you ever wanna try again"
"It gets boring 'round here just having sex with dogs and the same old men"

THE END

ITs best to get a 'barrel connector' and another piece of coax with

Alex:

A magmount Wilson 1000 will be both easier to install and easier to tune. When you need to go into a parking garage, or are worried about security, it unscrews easily enough for storage inside the vehicle, and you can leave the magnet on top. Even comes with a screw-on cover to keep the "nasties" out of the connector.

Ground Plane refers to the vehicle. Antennas are funny creatures. They don't work exactly like this, but it's easier to understand if you oversimplify. Think of the antenna as the + side of a battery. Without the - side, the battery does nothing but sit there. With the - side, power can flow. The ground plane, in this case, is the metal in your vehicle. The magnet mount on the Wilson 1000 "couples" to the body of your vehicle capacitively, so you have a "ground plane". "No Ground Plane" antennas are for vehicles with little or no metal in them, such as fiberglass campers, boats, etc. If your car is metal, or has a metal top or trunk, then you have a ground plane to couple to.

If you're going to go with the ball mount and the 102" whip, then do yourself a small favor: Ditch the RG-58 idea, and go with RG-8 Mini (Also called RG-8X). It's a little larger, but has better loss figures. Simply put, you'll hear better, and a little more signal will get to your antenna from your transmitter. It's worth the few extra cents.

I've tried the Firestik antennas on multiple vehicles, and was severely disappointed in them. If you want to go for a 4' fiberglass whip type antenna, I'd suggest the Wilson Silver Load. It's easier to tune, and will get a better signal out than the firestiks, IMHO...

Before you start thinking I'm a walking talking ad for Wilson Antennas, let me clarify a couple of things. I've tried alot of antennas in my days in CB, and I've found what seems to work best for me. For some reason, Wilson's been the winner every time. I've installed on Pickups, cars, Semi-trucks, boats, RV's, buses, campers, you name it.. Almost every time, the Wilson's won out.

Another antenna you might try is the Hustler HQ-27. I'm currently running one on my Peterbilt, and it's performing quite nicely. Comparable to, if not better than, the Wilson Silver Load and the Astatic Linear Load 1K I have tried on this particular vehicle. Granted, the Pete isn't a minivan, or a car, or whatever vehicle you're probably trying to install on, but it's worth a try.. for $17 or so (from HRO http://www.hamradio.com/) it's an inexpensive antenna to give a shot to, if you REALLY want to do the ball mount thing.

Again, I suggest the magmount Wilson 1000 for ease of installation, tuning, security, and good performance. The others are worth a shot as well.

Hope I didn't confuse you at all. I'll be home all weekend, and will check on the newsgroup here if you have any questions.

Thanks for the advice. I've been going back and forth for a week now trying to decide which antenna to get. The Wilson 1000 Mag Mount was at the top of my list all week. Now I am a little PO'd at myself. I called Wilson yesterday morning and got the closest dealer to me because I hate having to wait on stuff to come through the mail.

I found one, in Snellville, GA about 1.5 hours away from me. I took off on the drive, and on my way there I got to thinking that was gonna be one long whip sitting on top of my van, easy to steal, expensive, and being a newbie I thought damn it looks like this thing is gonna hit the bridges and such, which i am sure is not true.

I was also worried about the center of my rooftop, I have a luggage rack, and it's very flimsy right in the middle, maybe fiberglass.The only real sturdy metal is close to the windshield, and at the back towards the hatch so that also got me to thinking that maybe it wouldn't work for me.

Can you believe I got halfway there and turned around, traffic was terrible, and I already had all those thoughts going through my head, and ever since I have regretted it. Once I got home I thought DAMN, I could have my Wilson 1000 right now and enjoying it. You got me thinking again.

appreciated.

Really. Isn't that what I see the truckers using. I seen several on trucks today when I took the drive. It looks just like a firestik, thats one of the reasons i decided to go with it.

Hello Jim:

That would be great. Fishing, shooting, shottin skip, BBQ'in, sociializin, taking pictures of all the new friends ya all make.

I could see my way to make something like that, YEAH!

Maybe someone needs to do a site survey. You know drive around take and then post pictures. We will just have to put up with all the honey's walking around top less, some one has to do it I am sure.

We could set up base stations to radio folks in and such.

Hello PRDUNEN:

MaCO bought out the Wilson Antenna line I am told. The MaCo antenna assembly web site may give you a real close set of assembly instructions.

http://www.majestic-comm.com/assembly/index.htm

Try looking at the V 5/8 Antenna. Hope this helps.

Hello Reg1647:

How are you doing there? Hope all is well.

I think your talking about a old Honeywell Watt meter that uses the old and very large slugs, that are of course interchanagble, for different frequency bands. The meter movement on these meters was set up to have a very slow meter movement, allowing it to ruggied, but will not show SSB all that will unless you whistle into the mic for a long period of time. There where the hot set at one time.

Mcs is Megacycles, before they changed it to MHz. More of the academic acheivement world as compared to the real world. Your slug will work on frequencies 50-160 Mhz, or Mcs.

I had one of these old meters I traded to a old ham that just had to have it. I also used for a door stop to the radio room.

Hello Stevo:

Thats a Biiiiiiiiiiiiiiiitcheeeeeeeeeeeen web site.

http://www.patokalake.org/

I could get early reservations, get there earl and set up camp, and a base station with wAy Tooo much power, on one of my Interceptor 10K Antennas. And offer free cold beer for the new guys coming in. I will also show hospitality to all the top less honey's running around, I am sure thats a FCC Rule.

I can see myself now styling there with my Ray Ban "Blues Brothers" Sun Glass's, shorts, some top less honey hanging all over me, and a change maker on my belf for parking, OH YEAH!

We can have BBQ's, dacin, and just plain scoializin. Swapping war stories, setting next to the camp fires, and maybe even a few scoial cocktails.

Hello back at cha' Jay! That sounds like a plan having you as our social director and welcoming committee fo sho!

That place does seem to have a lot going for it, from boating/fishing to cabin rental and such. I could either drag my travel trailer there or we could rent a big townhouse type cabin thing and all pitch in for it.

Sounds good!

Doug;
There a quite a few users of this group that want to discuss legal CB usage. Antenna istallations, which CB is the best to buy etc.
I know you are really trying to stop lillegal CB mod's.
Which I agree with, but please stop the posts that have nothing to do with Radio?

There are a lot of people in this group that just enjoy radio, Antennas. Doug knows about antennas and radios. I guess if he wanted to he could share what he has learned?

The only thing I don't clear is my bank's drive-through. And that just touches a little bit so I don't mind going though it anyway. All the other drive-throughs around here have canopies that only extend about half way over the vehicle, just enough to keep the rain out of their window, so I always miss them. I'd imagine the parking garage at Tampa International Airport won't let me in but that was also the case before I got the antenna. Your van is probably a little shorter than mine judging from the pics you posted. I'd guess that you won't have a problem at your bank.

Sorry Mr. Professional Butt Pirate, there is no way the AKC will allow rec.radio.cb to become Al Jazeera for illegal CB keyclowns, no matter how much you guys whine about it.

Sorry Jason;
Its illegal if you use it. Not if you get caught. If you ask a question about how to mod your radio, or hook an amp up, your in the wrong group. I'll be a quick as anyone else to share what I have learned, but I won't advise you on mods or amps. You don't need them, get yourself a good antenna.
BTW, thanks for making a point for them.

One has to wonder how you expect to control the ng (if in fact it _is_ becoming AJ).
If there's no way for you to control the postings, then it can be said that it will happen no matter how much you whine about it.

Hrm.. There's a problem there..

There's two "schedules" of channels, apparently one for HF CB and the other for UHF CB. Channel 1 on HF in NZ is, according to the document, 26.330 on the HF schedule, and 476.425 on the UHF schedule. 26.425 seems to be a mishmash of the two, and crammed between channels 8 and 9.

Just an observation.

That excuse has already been thoroughly discredited in this newsgroup.

Ham licenses are practically given away. All you need to do is take a test, but the questions for the test come from a question pool that the FCC makes public -- you already have the answers. And it costs about as much as a happy meal. How much confidence does one need?

> But no all I read is a bunch of boring so called know >alls bleat on about how crap cb radio is.(CB - Citizens Band) Get it!

Yes, I get it -- Citizen's Band -- not Criminal's Band, or Children's Band, or I-want-to-be-a-ham-but-don't-have-the-confidence Band, or It's-not-illegal-until-you-get-caught Band.

> If you profess to know all, how can you learn.

Learn what? Many excuses for operating illegally have been presented in this newsgroup, but none of them have held up under scrutiny. If you have one that can, I'm perfectly willing to hear it.

And don't get me wrong -- I'm no goodie-two-shoes, and I have just as much disdain for the FCC as anyone else here, maybe even more. But I need a damn good reason if I'm going to violate federal laws and risk a fine of several thousand dollars and/or time in federal prison.

So my mind is open to learn -- what do you have to teach me, Jason?

Alex:

That's there for shipping, to keep the magnet base in place. DON't put it in the mount before putting it on the vehicle. It will scratch the crap out of your paint.

You can use it to throw at people who want to mess with your car. ::grin:: Otherwise, it'd make a great miniature picture frame for a pic of your mother in law (I really did this), just as soon as you add a "lid" for it, to make it look like a toilet seat. ::Smirk::

The posts you are referring to, antenna, legal CB, etc. are non keyclown posts. AKC respects this as a no-fly zone unless it is being used by keyclowns for the purpose of attack.

Why do you only ask Doug to stop?

What about the people posting Crisco Cathy porn, WA3MOJ gay forges, N8 court records, etc. ....or are these OK with you?

Now what does he dream about? Is not heterosex, maybe he dreams about gay sex? Or bisex?

If he dreams about heterosex, would that make him a keyqueen?

So I guess that means if he callls you a keyqueen, that means your straight. Good to know, thanks No No Not George

Thanks a bunch man. Should I adjust this antenna whip. I don't have external swr meter right now, but should have one very soon. I hope it doesn't mess anything up since I cant check it right now. I did check it, and am going to again in a second with the built in SWR meter, but I hear they are not accurate. Should I try several methods going up and down with the antenna? Someone told me that i should drop it all the way in. I've also been reading that going up or down with the antenna brings in different signals, something to do with 11 meters adjust the antenna..I wish i could find the site and maybe you would know what I was talking about

Alex: Put the whip about halfway in, then check the SWR on channel 1 and then channel 40.

If the SWR is higher on 40 than it is on 1, shorten the whip (put it into the base another 1/4 inch) and repeat the measurements on 1 and 40. When the SWR is about the same on 1 and 40, and below 2.0:1, you'll be safe. You SHOULD see an SWR below 1.5:1 easily all the way across the 40 channels. The SWR should also be lower on channel 19 than at the band edges (1 and 40) when you're done.

The internal SWR meter may or may not be accurate, but it'll at least get you close.

Oh, make sure the doors are closed, etc, when you check the SWR...
Something as simple as having a door open can make a drastic difference.

I just purchased one of these at a garage/tag sale. There is receive hiss but no signals heard; there is no transmitter output. I suspect the PLL has gotten out of lock.

Can anyone point me to an internet site with info on this rig?

Really? So how come you aint been back in 6 months? HUH? The AKC knows
why. The bottom line is you don't want a taste of AKC hospitality because you are a chicken ass whinebaby, little piece of truckstop meat. You won't show up cuz you are the closest resemblance to a vagina that ever walked bipedally in the history of this planet.

Bring it on, sidewalk sissy. When AKC finishes with you then you just post here that you was whipped. AFTER our web pages about you! hehehhe

Hello Abraham:

Again when the Messenger amps went to the 2SC2789 transistors in them, they didn't work all that well.

I have a Messenger 3V that has 4 each SD1446 Transistors in it, and it works like a champ since 1981!

I would want to see it work with my watt meter in line, before dishing out any dough ray me. This has always been a good policy before buying a radio, or amp. This has a tendacy to reduce the price at times, hehehehe. Especially when the radio or amp doesn't work. I never buy a used radio or amp without testing it first.

If it really does have a output of 800 watts you need a large alternator, something like 100 to 150 amp capability. And you will need a good antenna. A Radio Shack gutter mount will NOT work, it would just set there and catch fire. Suggest a 102 inch stainless steel whip, a 96 inch Francis Amazer Fiberglass whip, or a body mounted Wilson 1000. Use the larger coax like LMR-400, RG213, or 9913.

I replaced my stock 60 amp alternator with a 150 amp alternator. Needed the ground wire replaced, removed the 12 gauge wire and installed a 4 gauge wire from the alternator frame to the batteriers (-) Negative terminal. This was even in the alternators installation instructions. A good call. I also put in a 4 gauge wire from the alternator output to the Batteries (+) Positive terminal.

You certainly do not want a dime holding up a dollar, having a high current alternator with small wires. BIG Ten-4!

Running say 2 or 4 gauge wires from the Battery to the amp will have to be done. I use old gargen hose to wrap the Positive 2 or 4 gauge wire going thru the fire wall, or put a hole in the bottom of the chassie. And then seal it up with Black RTV Silicon Rubber. And a fuse at the battery is also a good call. Its also a good call to use the hose to protect the positive wire, and keeping it away from the muffler.

Hope this helps.

Alex;
Try what SSB said. There may antenna installations that require you to cut the whip. That is if you can't get the SWR down by adjusting the length, and you know the antenna is too long (SWR is lower on channel 1 than channel 40) you may have to trim it.
Try adjusting it first before you think about cutting it.

Haven't argued otherwise.

Doug knows about antennas and radios.

Can't prove it by me. But if it's true, he's free to share it.

Obviously. So far, the only thing he's sharing is the fact I already

Look, no offense, the only thing that's been "discredited" in this group in the last 2 months (since I've been here anyway)is the fact that the hams (or those professed to be so) are a bunch of whining azzholes. Some, including yourself, add MUCH needed tech/help. But MOST hams are only here for ONE purpose, to disrupt the group.....

Legal or illegal makes no difference to me.....since the group is rec.radio.cb. Not legal.cb/illegal.cb or HAM. It's also NOT up to the group to determine what's legal/illegal imho. We already have a FCC to do this. Geez, the population of the cb'er is so damn small I can't believe hams actually waste their time bitching about it. Back in the 70's-80's, that was a different story.

I'd rather read "illegal" cb crap than the disgusting remarks made by alledged hams. I condone neither....but the latter has NOTHING to do with "cb".

There is NO excuse for operating ANYTHING illegally...there's also NO excuse for a ham to come to a "cb group" and state the obvious....other than the fact that the ones who do, are bigger keyclowns than the ones they profess to police. Just look at the damned posts???? Disgusting representation of hams I'd say.

Like I pointed out earlier:

Every drive-thru you ever go through:-) Every parking gargage you enter:-) Every residential garage you ever park in:-) Some side streets/roads with low clearance(no trucks allowed):-)

I would have invested in a center loaded steel whip and mounted it on the hood/cowling area.....they actually "look" like a radio antenna when mounted there....without the hassle of clearance issues.

I have 2 antenna's. A little wil I keep on my Passat trunk all the time(painted the base to match the car)and a 1000 that I use for DX'ing that I just plop on the roof...when conditions permit.

Actually it has nothing at all to do with Ham vs CB'r, it's just a plain out right troll problem.

Oh please. The TROLLS are hams...or alledged to be anyway. How can you say it has nothing to do with CB vs HAM?? Every disgusting, filth-laced post I've read is from a disgruntled ham and aimed at a cb'er. You think it's cb'ers calling cb'ers "keyclowns"??? You think it's cb'ers who are bitching about the 15% of the posts that deal with illegal cb stuff?

Ah screw it. It's not worth my time anyway....I'll just fire up the filters and hopefully share idea's/solutions with people who have an interest in cb other than running it down...or playing keyboard commando/federal agent.

1005. ILLEGAL www.skywalkeramps.com reported to FCC

In 1978, the FCC banned the manufacture and sale of any external RF amplifier or amplifier kit capable of operating below 144 MHz without a grant of certification from the FCC. The rules specifically prohibit manufacture and sale of amps that operate between 24 and 35 MHz as a means to stem the flow of illegal Citizens Band amplifiers.

"Disclaimers that say the amps are not for 11 meter use are no protection from the law" says FCC's Riley Hollingsworth, "If it works with less than 50 watts drive and/or between 24 and 35 mhz out of the box, it is illegal".

"Any and all marketing of external RF power amplifiers or amplifier kits capable of operation below 144 MHz must be in strict compliance with ï¿½2.815 of the Commission's rules," Hollingsworth warned. He said the FCC would prosecute any violations

Stand by at 864-491-0290 to get a call from the FCC.

Well, you're right about Doug & George being hams, but if you saw when they first started posting here, it had nothing to do with what they post now. Doug started out posting normally and even offered modified radio gear for sale. But when he started to get a reaction out of people by spouting Illegal this, illegal that, he saw it was much more fun.
Geo started out being a "keyklown" himself, posing as someone else that used to post here, spouting how the benefits of amps, even giving Doug a hard time for his BS. But that too changed when he saw the reaction that Doug was getting, so Geo decided to be a keyboard Rambo.
"I've read is from a disgruntled ham and aimed at a cb'er. You think it's cb'ers calling cb'ers "keyclowns"??? You think it's cb'ers who are bitching"

To answer you, some are playing both sides of the fence, GW, Chuck, Hell I've seen Doug try to fan his own flames when no one responds.

While what you say about the language and repetitive posts being from hams, well they are Ham operators that are being trolls, a troll is a troll no matter if he's a Ham, cb'r, fed agent etc etc.

Now watch Geo & Doug respond with their usual BS.

1012. Another Question Wilson 1000 Magnet

Just wanted to ask if my wilson 1000 would work as good a little bit further back than the middle of the roof. Right now it is about 7" from the windshield, (not even middle) and the coax is run through the sliding door window on my van (seats right behind the driver seat) and about 2-2.5 foot of coax is showing. The only reason I put it there was I can tell by pressing down on the roof that there is more metal there. Also Wilson's site said 6-12" from winshield was best. It's like right above the dome light.

I can eliminate so much coax showing by moving it back some towards my luggage rack. The luggage rack is hard plastic, not metal. Using tape underneath the luggage rack and being able to tape the coax underneath the luggage rack and running it through the same window will then only show about 4 inches of cable.

My swr is about 1.3-1.4 on channels 1, 20 and 40 where it sits now. I really want to move it to hide some more of the coax. I wanted to know that if I can get my readings about the same as they are now am I going to be losing any performance by not having it right on top of the good sturdy metal where it sits now?

I have mine dead center of the van. I think you're making the flexing metal issue bigger than it really is. If they put a luggage rack up there, does that mean the metal in the middle would be strong enough to hold up all that luggage? Should be strong enough for the antenna. Mine is but it's a different van too. It does flex, but nothing dangerous.

The center of the van will give you the most even radiation pattern. If you place the antenna at the back of the van, then the strongest signal will go toward the front. If you place it at the front of the van, the signal will be strongest toward the back of the van. It follows the larger part of the vehicle. Put it in the center if you want it to be more even front to back. the radiation pattern will look a little more oval (sides are shorter than front to back).

hth,
-Dr.X

Listen to this hypocrite cryyyyy. OMG check the archives, Landshark started out posting threats, insults, and troll posts, and a few transsexual gay posts in alt.sex groups. He only recently became Mr.

Dead center of the vehicle (if possible) is the best place.
1.3 is a good swr reading
When hiding any coax make sure you do not coil it as it will create inductance.

Look little troll-boi, the only thing that will be up anyone's ass is your hand trying to pleasure yourself. Do you have any redeeming qualities, or are you as you appear, a useless, cowardly, quivering mass of oxygen wasting DNA that has been pegged as needing mental heath professionals to tell you what to do next?

Let's get a few things straight: First, I'm not a ham. Second, there are plenty of hams in this newsgroup that are illegal operators.
Third, trolling doesn't require a ham license, nor does it require a position on the legal/illegal issues. Fourth, CB radio doesn't exclude hams, and many hams are also CB radio operators.

Trolls are trolls, hams are hams, and CBers are CBers. This is true regardless of which group they claim to represent, regardless of their stance on illegal operation, and regardless of the fact that there will always be a few malcontents that will try to make everyone else's life as miserable as their own. If you can't make these distinctions then you might as well start trolling now because that's what you will end up doing later on.

Nah, not at all. I've seen pictures of you, and no woman in her right mind

We learn about keyclown websites selling amps, and auctions for them.
We DO share that info...with Riley and with ebay's abuse staff. What you are actually saying is that we should share stuff with keyclowns.

Nope. Never.

If anyone at all, legal CB'ers should be disturbed by keyclowns, not those preventing keyclownism. If there was no keyclownism there would be no AKC.

Blah, blah, look, maybe you missed my point or I wasn't clear. I'm damn positive that cb'ers are cb'ers and hams are hams!! I'm also positive that trolls are trolls....but thanks for pointing out the obvious. MY POINT was that so far, the trolls seem to be hams that are doing NOTHING but shaking a hornets nest in regards to what's legal/illegal, name-calling and just general disruption of rec.radio.CB. And I CAN AND DID make the friggin' distinction!! I'm the one saying the disgruntled hams are causing the trouble!! How could I possibly make that point MORE distinct?

And I won't "end up trolling", Dr Crane....but I appreciate the online psychological exam all the same. I'm just glad I didn't pay for it:-).

Even you can't play that stupid, he lives in a three dwelling section eight slum. Face the facts, your hero is the most fugly shit bag on the planet.

Keep denying it tho, if it makes you feel any better about the loser.

The point is that the trolling is neither exclusive nor limited to hams. -Your- point was just the opposite.

The problems in this group are because of the trolls, and only -some-of them are hams. I hope you aren't suggesting that trolls are ok as long as they aren't hams......

>Fourth, CB radio doesn't exclude >> hams, and many hams are also CB radio operators.

Actually you did by suggesting that only hams are responsible for the problems. I could turn the coin and say that the problems are caused by illegal operators, but that's not true either.

For starters, you can answer a simple question: Are there trolls on this group that -aren't- hams?

I guess I have to draw a picture..... the trolls, whoever they are, will pose as anybody as long as it suits their purpose. They use loose associations and behaviors to make the regulars believe that the troll is some other person. As far as I know, Doug hasn't posted here in a couple years, yet everyone thinks the trolling is coming from him because he is so hated by so many. The same thing happened with Mark Fuller, Leland Scott and and a few others. And the character "George" was obviously the result of a troll meant to taunt Twist because of his staunch anti-Bush position -- George Bush/George Busch -- get it?

So why do they do this? Because they are screwed up individuals that have no control of their own life and feel the need to control the lives of other people. They get a buzz whenever people like you fall for their tactics. And that's exactly what you are doing when you jump into the 'hams vs. CBers' slugfest -- meanwhile, the trolls that incited this melee sit back, watch the action and laugh.

But hey, if you like playing the fool that's your business.

Yeah, I'll bet you can't find more than 60, 70, 80 posts, over a 12 year period, where I used the same language that Doug and Geo use some 10 to 20X a day. I never sat there flooding the newsgroup like Doug does, so there is a big difference.
I don't know Frank, maybe it's called growing up, something that both Doug & Geo can't seem to do.
On a better note, how's the job search? Have you tried Monster Jobs.
Dice and the number of other online sources?

CITIZENS ALERT:

Reports of a mentally impaired individual (Mopeadope) wandering aimlessly around Ohio knocking on doors and looking for an "n8WWM" have been flooding in to Ohio authorities. Police say this individual suffers from a rare disease called keyclownism which leaves the patient with a peanut sized brain, prone to extremes of retardation and homosexuality. The mentally confused victims of the keyclown disease mix up numbers and addresses and have trouble obeying federal laws, often frequenting truck stops seeking male semen to ingest, often dressing as fairies or ballerinas. If you see such an individual don't try and apprehend him, call the AKC (or an Animal Control Unit) immediately.

You know Doug, I haven't operated illegally for years, but you and Geo make me want to piss on your parade. Matter of fact, I haven't transmitted on 11 meters for over a year. You don't even know if any one here has either. Why would it bother you as a no-code tech if they have?

The ant. is on the second floor 504
http://img4.exs.cx/my.php?loc=img4&image=dogie04.jpg
If you can count, there are only 2 doors, 502 being the 1st floor, the other door is a common entrance to 504 the second floor and 506 the third floor.

Your WRONG again.
I'm not minimizing anything. I know it is illegal. I choose to ignore the law of my own accord and accept any responsibility for my actions. As far as deriding the AKC, you do that every time you post. Instead of posting as a psychiatrist, maybe you should see one.

LOL, those photos have been doctored in photoshop. You pasted the head of a fat kid you found on the internet (probably on a gay site) onto someones body standing in some doorway. The door numbers are doctored too. That picture was taken from the sidewalk, probably hundreds of miles away from Toledo. Anyone who has been to Toledo knows it doesn't look AT ALL like that, asslicker.

No dummy, if you ever worked construction (or ever worked at all) you would know that the stairway on a building is next to the wall and NOT in the middle. I think I will stick with what I said in the previous post.
As far as a sock puppet, you lack of internet knowledge is showing. I have Ever wonder what BCC stands for? BLIND Carbon Copy.. Meaning that none of the recipients can see the BCC line in the headers...

You really should run for the Presidency.. you'd fit right in with all this misdirection.

Hrm.. If it doesn't matter to you, then why make such a mess of this newsgroup?

If twist's credibility is in question in your mind, then why do you believe him when he says he has?

Sounds to me like you're just here to cause hate and discontent...
Kinda like some CB operators I've run across, but unlike the majority of CBers...

So, you like to act like the 10% we find distasteful in a particular group, but you choose another forum for this acting out.. Hrm...

And what do you expect to accomplish?

Yep, them photos mopedope posted are phony as a 3 dollar bill. Even a KEYCLOWN can see poor little mopeadope made that whole trip up in his mind. I would say it indicates he desires to be a sissyslave and personally serve his AKC masters!

First of all, there is no "George" in this newsgroup, assclown. That was a Landshark ASSUMPTION made with no proof whatsoever, and probably influenced by too much GAY FANTASY or semen swallowing. Second, the AKC is a huge organization and Doug does not even post here anymore, you know he hasn't posted here for years. Yet keyclowns remain afraid and whining. Why? Because they know they are POWERLESS to stop the AKC, as shown by Mopeadope's feminine mewling and fruitless trips to Toledo.

The trolls could be Doug, "George", Leland, Ralph, Bob, Liberace's ghost, or Pellets the Wonder Rabbit; it doesn't really matter. What matters is that they several of you by the balls and none of you will let go. We all know that if you stop feeding the trolls so they will leave, but too many here just keep feeding them. Including you.

Actually, I'm waiting for the outcome of the elections. If Bush wins
I'll probably build my shop into a full-time business because any job
I get with a big company will likely be exported. If Nethercutt wins I'm moving to Idaho or Alaska. And if -both- win I'm heading for the hills as fast as I can!

There are only 2 doors to this 3 dwelling unit. The door in the center of the building is the first floor apartment 502. The door closest to the wall contains the stairway (why would anyone build them in the center)and is a common entrance to the second floor 504 and the third floor 506 as I have said in an earlier post. If you look closely at the picture you will notice that next to the 3 mail boxes there appears to be a 2 button door bell. But don't let facts interfere with your delusion.
The hand is obscured because he is holding the door knob. Try it on your own door and see. You won't because you already know the truth, but truth is not what you are interested in.
Picture is not pasted in as it would be almost impossible to paste it BEHIND the door and still be able to maintain the glare of the glass that partially obscures his face.
He doesn't have a shadow because the sun needs to be behind him and he is obviously on the inside of the door. Unless you contend that the sun is inside the stairway.
But spin it any way you like George, maybe John Kerry will give you a job on his staff. You keep on spewing it, I'll continue to expose you for the fraud that you are.
Have a nice day :)

You should give up trying to spin these pics to your advantage, it shows

He certainly has a more likable personality than dougay. And he gets better looking women. Peppermint Pattie puts Krisco Kathy to shame.

That's sounds more like adaptive active bias. It's a bit tough to find a biasing device that tracks the precise non-linear characteristics of the amplification device, and you have to be especially watchful of thermal runaway.

This would not be a problem in the CB area, where the tendency is to overdrive them anyway.....

I guess it all boils down to how much you want to invest in a good design. At some point, you reach that magical point of diminishing returns.

I wonder why more ham and commercial two-way radio amps aren't using better designs than the simple basic stuff.

What I described is kind of a psuedo-Darlington connection. It has less gain than the classic Darlington, but has a higher frequency response and a lower VBEsat. It also has the Darlington's high linearity. And while the final will still saturate, it will do so with more difficulty. The problem of thermal runaway is avoided by mounting both transistors on the same heatsink. The real problem comes from the collector capacitances (the devices being RF power transistors), so the pairs must be carefully chosen and matched for phase using a few extra reactive components. Lot's of math. Needless to say, it's not a popular design except in some very high power amplifiers where other methods would be more expensive.

The real expense is paid in the initial design of a custom component, and that's just an one-time expense. After the design is finalized even custom components are relatively inexpensive, especially when ordered in large quantities. (For custom inductors, Micrometals has been a real good company to work with over the years. They even have composite cores that would be ideal for applications just like this.)

>I wonder why more ham and commercial two-way radio amps aren't using >better designs than the simple basic stuff.

Well, many do. I'm sure you've looked at component lists and seen inductors that are listed only as in-house numbers. Sometimes that applies to semiconductors, too (such as the Peavey dual-diode I was talking about in another thread). Sometimes capacitors are chosen not for their linearity but for their -non-linearity. And everything I said here about linearity also applies to other factors -- seemingly run-of-the-mill components are sometimes carefully selected for specific temperature coefficients, equivalent series resistances, breakdown characteristics, etc. Even tubes and transistors are often selected for gain figures that fall within a range smaller than the defined tolerances of the part specification. What often appears to be an off-the-shelf part may not have an off-the-shelf replacement. An example is the use of sequential mic/keying relays used on many older tranceivers -- the modification to the relay is rarely documented, and replacement with a generic (synchronous) relay can quickly burn out the screens in the finals. Been there, done that, and the T-shirt is now a shop-rag.

A good design requires a LOT of engineering, not just big heatsinks and pretty PCB artwork. The specs for Brian's amp don't demonstrate much engineering at all. Heck, even a little negative feedback would help that amp immensely but he won't even to -that- much. Oh well.

I didn't notice, but is he still using a single relay to switch both the input and output?

I skip over all of that crap so I have no idea who is posting what.
And since it's crap I really don't care who posts it -- it's not worth reading anyhow. The only thing I know for sure is that the trolls, whoever they may be, aren't going away until people stop feeding them.
Cases in point: I plonked Cranium and he left. I plonked Race Warrior and -he- left. I've plonked many others and they have left. Okay, they might still be around under other aliases, but I don't feed them anymore and they don't beg me for troll fodder. That's how to make them leave. If you want "George" and Doug to leave, try doing the same. OTOH, if you -like- them here then just continue to give them the attention they crave. Either way, I really don't care how you handle it because, like I said before, I skip over all that crap.

Nope not a rumor. After time and abuse the filter networks on the ass end of the output section age. You can dial it back in with the tuning inductors, but if it has been run really hard then replacing the section is best, it's cheaper than a rebuild down the road when it finally takes off.

Ironically you can tune it with a scope and an old tube AM radio, yes folks an AM radio! You watch the scope till you get the junk out of the outputs then liastn to the radio, when you can hear your talk radio again then it's tuned, crude but amazingly effective.

I've been inside the occasional Behringer to repair cold solder etc in the old daze, they had notorious QC problems, but in the past few years they have come leaps and bounds. I still have to turn them away due to difficulty obtaining parts. I recently bought a couple of their DI boxes and you can't beat them for twice the price. I'm seriously looking into their DSP2496 system controllers right now.

Hi Jim. Perhaps you missed the last post on which you chimed in and I asked your opinion of the radio being discussed, so here it is again. For the record, do you agree or disagree with the statement "Peaking and tuning will not raise the S units of a 4 watt cb rdio"?

The voodoo comment wasn't in response to anything you wrote or posted.
It was in response to claiming one could raise the S units on a 4 watt cb with a peak and tune.
Besides, I don't even use 4 watts, I use 3 most of the time.
You going to try and make this picnic thingy?

The PLL Board problem seems pretty common in the ts-440s radio. The parts radio may have the same issues. I don't believe kenwood sells the replacement board anymore... in fact it's been out of production for some years now.

Back in days of old... I repaired my share of 440 pll problems. You might try resoldering the traces and reheating the board with a shrink tube gun. Sometimes the probably was just a bad solder connection or that $#%&* wax glue used to lock the parts down.

good luck

Good luck finding that one. All I can tell is it is or was made by a company called TransEL and if you plan to use it on ssb you will need to change the cap as it keeps it keyed too long.

If the photo was tampered with a little then it was tampered with all the way. It's a bad photoshop job mopeadope, but who can blame you, you're just a keyqueen!

No, peabrain, but the numbers should correspond to the doors, two of the numbers should be over one of the doors. Instead the wrong number is above the door, they should be the opposite.

The picture was doctored anyway. Twithed says so.

look at http://www.geocities.com/iamnotgeorge2004/in the blow up of doug..the place where you say there is a doorbell is muddy to the point of no detail.

yet YOU say there are two doorbells there hmmm?

YOU NAILED IT. That is exactly how keyclowns operate.

-N8 returned fire against the keyclowns, so they began posting crisco cathy and court records.

-Leland stood up to the keyclowns, and the Al Banys posts started.

-"George" angered keyclowns, and they responded with Nancy Busch postings.

-AND THE LATEST...Dave Hall dared question keyclown beliefs, and now there are Kim Hall postings.

Keyclowns think they can stop dissent against illegal CB by going after your family or who they think your family is. Never happen. Never happen keyclowns.

That's right, assclown. It's so the Fire Dept. can quickly identify which address belongs to which door. Explain to us why you think 506 is labeled 504 so as to confuse emergency personnel.

No, he is in the right group, as many can answer the question and it is not illegal to share information, it's merely folly to watch ignoramus' like yourself jump up and down and hold their breath and claim "this information will not be permitted"..

>I'll be a quick as anyone else to share what I >have learned, but I won't advise you on mods >or amps.

All the better, as there are much more informed, educated, and communicatively skilled ops in here compared to yourself. These ops are able to comprehend the sharing and exchange of information is prefectly acceptable and legal. Your posts are examples you are unable to comprehend such simple facts of the world regarding the internet, the FCC, the free and unfettered exchange of information, the United States and the freedom to do so, which places you near the bottom of the ranking percentile of intelligence that frequent this group.

>As you have proven about yourself,

Invoction of another as a means of obfuscating your incomptence has failed for you so often, I am surprised to see you still failing with it.

>with your accusation that I was Frank because >I asked about saltwater fishing.

Check your retainment ability,..it's lacking and incorrect,,,,again.
Base it on your identity compulsion.

>One of your brighter moments.

>You on the other hand have totally >demonstrated your knowledge of electronics.

Only you seem to think so..,,yet, fret not, ,,you won't be called upon to produce any post or anything that would actually provide for your personal problems. You've been schooled.
Anyways, that's ok. My knowledge of radio law, proper communications (something of which you have demonstrated your lack of skill) and public address more than makes up for what I lack in electronics.

>(NOT)

What a malady you suffer,,,,ongoing seer.

>You don't need them,

You don't get to decide for others. Your job is to get mad at yourself for the lack of status you achieved in life and foster yourself upon this group as decided by others..

>Don't think so,

The fact remains, you don't get to decide what is acceptable discussion.
Deal with it.

> Almost everyone in this group has control of

You, and whoever this "they" is you appointed yourself spokesperson as, can't even figure out who it is you're talking to.

>get yourself a good antenna.

Get yourself a life and let go of the tail of others' and stop illustrating your ignorance in the way of the law regarding the free exchange of information.

>Why don't stop illustrating your ignorance and >total lack of comprehensive capability.

I'm not the one self-deluding myself and fancying myself the group moderator,,,you are, swee pea. Fact remains, you don't get to decide what is acceptable topic. The sooner you can accept reality and stop deluding yourself, the faster you can heal and stop hating yourself.

Those rules are older than you,,or at least, appears to be the case.
Now, try and regurgitate anything you were taught this year..perhaps you can comprehend that searching for amp schematics are legal, as is a site providing for such information. The FCC rule pertaining to amplifier use that you posted with the above link has no relation to one seeking the information that 1647 was searching.

You are SOOOOO stupid, same ISP no reason to change. You on the other hand change so often that I have been unable to ignore your stupidity, that's why I have decided to yank your pink leash every chance I get.
If you had any knowledge of building construction you would know that it would be a waste of money and space to put 2 stairways in a crapbox welfare house. And being the typical homo that you are, I'm not surprised that you yet again have to make a sexually deviant remark when confronted with facts.

The thing that strikes me, is that for around $110, you have an unfinished amp. You still will need a case, heatsink, coaxial fittings, grommets, wire, fuse holder, etc. You can buy pretty much the same design cheaper and already complete. That being said, if you just want to do it for kit building experience, then this is a good starter.

Actually I have everything to build this except the circuit board, that brings the price way down. Nothing brings me more satisfaction than building something myself. I've been toying with the idea of building something with tubes also, but the last time I fooled with a tube amp I got bit pretty good. Hurts MUCH worse than any AC shock, being an electrician by trade,

I've been shocked plenty.

Hey, are the Astros gonna pull it out tonight? The dude that's pitching

I'm rooting for Houston..tired of the Braves.

I was about to say these amps are crap (a friend had one), but after reading the page I see there were imitations floating around, my guess is he had a copy.

The first occurance of the callsign WA3MOJ was late in 2001, but you were whining about GWB almost two years before that -- almost a full year prior to the election. And Phil Covington was the first to note the post with the callsign, not Dick. Dick later "identified" WA3MOJ as Aaron Voobner (yes, Dick was occasionally wrong).

To be fair, I didn't like GWB either. But I shudder to think of what might have happened if Gore was in office during 9/11. I have no doubt that Bush is a bigger crook than Nixon could have ever hoped to be, but Gore's elevator was completely out of order.

Whatever you say Georgie boy. You are certainly in a class, the special class. BTW, did they hand out cookies today? Did the teacher show you her sock puppet?
Now it's time to watch the monkey dance.

Same basic design you are looking at. Matter of fact, most 2 transistor amps you see are basically copies.

I have a friend that runs some Behringer stuff in his band. He uses a lot of sequences, too. I'll give him a call and ask exactly what he runs and what he recommends.

All you can talk about is your fascination with the male genitalia. Wouldn't it be easier on your psyche if you would just come out of the closet and proclaim your gayness? It must be an awful mental struggle to deny your true self.

What may seam to be minor differences can be big problems. Having wires routed differently or the components spaced differently can cause unwanted emissions. The reason I'm choosing to build the EB63 is that it is a tried and true design that hams use.

Agreed. I've found most people have a price, no matter what their belief system may be. But there are quite a few that will stick with their principles until the price gets WAY up there.

You lack quite a bit of skill in electronics, which you have demonstrated quite often. You have had many years to be shooled in electronics, but you still refuse to learn, or for some reason can't learn. Why is that?

Skipp, it is a shame you need to post under an alias like this, but that's because Frank whipped your ass last time around and showed your voodoo cb amplifier bias for what it is.

Regarding the EB63, this is an amplifier that has an output of 140 watts (PEP) over a frequency span of 2-30 MHz. The amplifier uses two MRF-454 transistors. These transistors are specified at 80 watts power output with 5 watts of input drive, which makes it illegal for CB. Therefore, an amp that is illegal for use on CB and even illegal to market IS NOT ON TOPIC FOR rec.radio.cb. CB is defined as 4 watts output and no external RF amplifier. Please, take your discussion to alt.radio.pirate.

Who is N8ORF?

The keykweenz can talk all they want. What matters is they don't know shit and they are so dumb they don't know that they don't know shit.
Hehehe.

mopeadope is a dumb dork with a 12 gauge digicam.

Significant to the keyqueens we put out of business. Mao Tse tung said it right, even though he was a commie: "A journey of a thousand miles begins with a single step". You keysissies are slowly but ultimately being squashed. that is why you bitch and whine so much.

A real interesting contradiction on this site......

From the MODS Special Page:
http://www.wholesalecbradio.com/ALL_CB_RADIO_MODS_SPECIAL.htm

"Most stock-out-of-the-box radios do 4 watts that's about 5 mile range.
After mods the same radios do 25 to 45 watts and talk at least 20-30 miles."

Then, on another page, they de-bunk their own hype:
http://wholesalecbradio.com/Truth_about_power.htm

"Just as a matter of information, most radios are built with a five-watt final.
So, if some shop tells you that they can get 40 or 50 watts out of one, draw your own conclusion. There is no way of making this happen."

Like they said..... "Draw your own conclusion."

Boy... That was smart..

If you're not Doug(hboi), then you're inviting someone to go out to the "new" address on the card, which could be taken as an attempt to harrass someone else vicariously through the people you claim are harassing you. Interesting diversionary tactic to try to get someone in trouble...

If you are Doug(hboi), then you just posted another address which is different than the FCC and QRZ addresses on file. Now this could be construed as an invitation to come out to visit, or it could be construed as notification of your new living address. If it's the first, not too smart. If it's the second, still not too smart, because if you've been living there more than 90 days without filing an address change with the FCC, your license is now void.

Any way you slice it, that just wasn't smart.

Nope, you did not...but glad you remembered. AKC Agrees. Only someone desperate and limpwristed comes to people's houses with a 12 gauge digicam. The whole thing is a hoot. A sidewalk sissy who can't take being blasted in a NG on the internet comes to people's homes and takes pictures. Proving what? Proving that he is a sidewalk sissy who can't take being blasted in a NG on the internet. HEHEHE! Must suck to be a mopeadope.

All AKC will do is report the illegal activity to the local LEO's, backed up with our videos and stills. Makes it so much easier nowadays since local LEO's can bust keyclowns. Fun to watch keysissies cry when their stuff gets confiscated, too. Makes a great addition to the AKC highlight video.

There you go, pushing your personal life off on other people again..

Just because you have those particular wants, desires, and issues doesn't mean the rest of the world does.

This is really getting tired Doug(hboi).

BTW, I just did a little research. Turns out you can write or download
.cgi scripts that will label your outgoing packets with whatever IP you choose (or any other identifying info). All you need is a friendly ISP that will give you access to a directory that will let you upload and run your own .cgi scripts. Or simply run your own UNIX server. The only positive way to tell where the posts are coming from is by the PATH line, but those end at the Google server. So those Google posts from Toledo could really be coming from just about anywhere.

Now there are a lot of people who hate Doug. But I can think of at least one person who would already know how to do this type of misdirection and have the motivation to do it -- Phil Covington.
Alternatively, the posts could be coming from someone who has never identified himself on the newsgroup, which is not so far fetched when you realize that Voobner never posted under his real name (despite Phil's claim that he is Dwight Stewart).

The point is that those posts may or may not be coming from Doug and there is no way to be sure one way or the other. It's easy to believe what you want to believe. However, without proof it's just speculative guessing.

That sounds interesting. My current ISP uses a Windoze server so I won't even try it with them. But I might be switching ISPs here very soon, and if I do I'll see if I can find one with a UNIX server that will let me use my own .cgi scripts.

Dream on, jizzboy. Two things keyclowns do:

1. Buy ham gear and be unable to legally use it.
2. Beat off to pics of ham amps

Am watching the game, jackass. Imported my settings to the wireless laptop.
Score is now 4-2, Houston.

Commercial break now.

Yup, I'm guilty, as you are too, but that's besides the point.
If "EVERYONE" stopped, maybe, but I have seen, as you, that some will fan their own flames to start the BS.

LOL!!! I'll agree, if they both win, I'm packing the family and heading to Idaho too. Plus Pellets the wonder Rabbit LMAO!!! Where did you find that name?

Make me an offer. I have learned that AM radio is not for me. I expect to much, and it's just not happening. Antenna is 2 days old, never been trimmed. Have Magnet mount, the whip, weather cap, and box it came in. I also have a Cobra 29 LTD Classic 5 days old. I can easily just take both back to the dealer I bought them from, especially the Radio. the antenna however I bought in Snellville, GA which I drove 2 hours to get, and really dont want to drive back.

First off, I didn't post that. So, you're starting crap with the wrong person. again...

and how is it, when someone is confronted with the truth, that person always wants to attack that persons religious beliefs?

The Bible Speaks very clearly about you, Mr. Douglas Adair.

"Then shall he say also unto them on the left hand, Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels:"
-- Matthew 25:41

That's right, Dougie, You're on your way to hell, and devil is laughing his fool head off at you. But it doesn't have to be that way... Bible says:

2 Peter 3:9 -- "The Lord is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness; but is longsuffering to us-ward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance."

John 3:3 "Jesus answered and said unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God. "

Romans 3:10 - "As it is written, There is none righteous, no, not one:"

Acts 17:30 - "And the times of this ignorance God winked at; but now commandeth all men every where to repent: "

Romans 10:9-10 - "That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation."

Romans 10:13 -"For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved. "

That's Dougie, God made a way of excape for you. Yes, I've made mistakes in the Past... I've done some really dumb stuff in this newsgroup in the past, and I've repented for it. But you douglas adair, you are lost and going to hell, without Christ. I will be the witness to your judgement. and I now stand blameless before the Lord, because I had the boldness to declare his Gospel in this newsgroup.

and..... In case, you don't ever do this.... This will be your fate....:

Matthew 25:41
Then shall he say also unto them on the left hand, Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels:

and eventually...:

And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire. Revelation 20:15

Make your Choice Doug, before it's too late...

Dear Chad,

We're sorry to hear that you're having difficulty locating spare parts for Behringer equipment.
This is our first post into this group - and apart from the spares, we are delighted to hear what you all have to say about our products !
Usually it's not a problem to get hold of our spares, but perhaps you need to find a better point of contact ? We're assuming that you're based in mainland USA, so we've taken the liberty to forward your details to the service manger at Behringer USA. He'll be in touch with you shortly, and we're sure that he can guide you to the most appropriate source.

Best regards,

Gotta do it with the cover off to get as much stray RF as possible. There are tuning holes in the top cover that correspond to the inductors. Never hurts to pop the top and look for burnt components in the network. Also a good idea and pull the power board and hard wire all the screw studs together that reference ground. This keeps a loose screw from the bottom plate from causing major problems! (the bottom plate is the ground bus (grrrrr))

The DSP2496 is slick, it takes a digital input which is going to be nice when I get a digital FOH console. The price is right and they work great. I have used their subharmonic synth, it's great also, right where DBX left off! The digital EQ is cool, but console wise my needs are above what they produce at this time.

I think it's wonderful to see such a company do a complete 180 in just a few years. Behringer products are popping up more and more on the road and are becoming accepted by visiting engineers. Can't go wrong. I use their products for tools moreso than as a whole but they have what I need.

A real interesting contradiction on this site......
From the MODS Special Page:
http://www.wholesalecbradio.com/ALL_CB_RADIO_MODS_SPECIAL.htm
"Most stock-out-of-the-box radios do 4 watts that's about 5 mile range.
After mods the same radios do 25 to 45 watts and talk at least 20-30 miles."
Then, on another page, they de-bunk their own hype:
http://wholesalecbradio.com/Truth_about_power.htm
"Just as a matter of information, most radios are built with a five-watt final.
So, if some shop tells you that they can get 40 or 50 watts out of one,
draw your own conclusion. There is no way of making this happen."
Like they said..... "Draw your own conclusion."

Yep,,,you've managed to illustrate people are inclined to believe all kinds of good stuff...like the ability to square the power and raise the S units of a 4 watt cb with a "peak and tune." Although is should be rare, even some educated hammies subscribe to this bunk. Others are so cornfused by this scenario that when they aren't really sure if this is possible or not, they become afraid of offering up their opinion and dance all around this subject without stating what they believe one way or the other.

Those rules are older than you,,or at least, appears to be the case.
Now, try and regurgitate anything you were taught this year..perhaps you

What incorrect relation or analogy did your mind draw between the

Actually, I've managed to fry an amp on my first repair attempt of that amp, fixed a microphone on my first repair attempt, successfully cleaned the guts, nooks, and crannies of a very pain-in-the-ass radio-to-work-on, also a first attempt, and changed the crystals (also successfully) on a very old 23 channel cb. When all is said and done, I'm very satisfied at the results I have provided myself, as up until a few years ago, me looking at the inside of a radio was like you staring at an open book.

Anyways, that's ok. My knowledge of radio law, proper communications (something of which you have demonstrated your lack of skill) and public address more than makes up for what I lack in electronics.

What I have demonstrated, is your vast ignorance concerning radio law and your low self-esteem that forces you to attempt to appoint yourself group moderator in claiming what topics relating to radio may or may not be permitted.

>You have had many years to be shooled in

I have had zero years in which to be schooled in electronics. You are becoming extremely cornfused and perplexed, but this was shown to be the case when you tried to claim moderator status.

Self-projection can be countered with education, but it is your right to insist on remaining clueless, in the dark, out of the loop, and blaming others for your ignorance.

The US double-dealing foreign policies that ignite such hatred against America are the result of decades upon decades of manipulation by big business, and each administration has made their own contributions to those policies for the past 100+ years. This storm has been building for quite some time. Bush may have seeded the clouds, but I believe that the attack was unavoidable, whether it was to come as it did on 9/11, or in another form by some other disgruntled madman.

I'm thinking of building the EB63. Has anyone in this group built one and if so are there any tips, tricks, dos and don'ts? Or should I build it per the instructions? BTW, in this thread ALL troll posts directed at myself will be ignored.

Cool! Hey Doc,,,let me know when you start funnin' around with building your own..,,,I'd like to check it out. We need to do the eyeball thing, eventually..I'm pretty sure I'll be off the flats just south of you next Saturday night...I'll let you know for sure,,,I''ll definitely be local on the radio next weekend so you can give me a shout.

Will do Twist. Me and the locals in this area run channel 10 or I can be found on ssb just about anywhere above 40. I'm gonna order the PCB tomorrow, hopefully will get it by this weekend. A friend of mine has sheet metal equipment and said I could use it if I supply the aluminum. I haven't used a stomp shear or brake in ages so I better get a little extra just in case.

You can get a shell account for $25 a year. Most allow running 2 processes.
Do a search for IRC shells.

>Stick your God squad horse crap up your keister, liar. Christianity is >a minority religion in any case. If you believe any of that tripe you >posted go believe it. Your brand of religion is garbage.

Psalms 14:1 - "The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God. They are corrupt, they have done abominable works, there is none that doeth good. "

Psalms 53:1 "The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God. Corrupt are they, and have done abominable iniquity: there is none that doeth

>Make your own choice and I'll make mine and the next guy will make >his, and so on. Phony Christian, threatener of women and pets. Maybe >AKC's are gonna have to find all these wacko religious groups and post >some of your past stuff, like somebody did before, Mr. Limpwrist. Had >you in a tizzy, as we all know.

Luke 12:19 - "And I will say to my soul, Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry."

Luke 12:20 - "But God said unto him, Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee: then whose shall those things be, which thou hast provided?

Your day is coming Doug.

Revelation 20:12 - "And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened: and another book was opened, which is the book of life: and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works."

Matthew 12:36 - "But I say unto you, That every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment."

Galatians 6:7 - "Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

Matthew 10:26 - "Fear them not therefore: for there is nothing covered, that shall not be revealed; and hid, that shall not be known."

You may post what you wish, I don't use Christian newsgroups, too much foolish bickering...

Again, I leave you with this sobering reminder....:

Revelation 20:15 - "And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire."

God Bless Doug...
